Each month Cable Guide's Brian Viner reviews what's new and happening with the stars

Body language

Actress and singer Rebecca Wheatley is a terrific choice to present Body Beautiful, Living's new series about dieting. Not because she has been on a diet 'pretty much constantly since I was five years old, when I was sent to school with crispbreads for lunch', but because she diets for the right reasons. 'When I lose weight I want to do it for myself,' she tells me. 'Not because I want someone else to approve of me. I've never had any problem with relationships, whatever my size. Because relationships are about self-confidence. There's no point wanting someone to say "I love you just the way you are" if you don't love yourself just the way you are.'

Nevertheless, Wheatley, who is 36 and best known for playing Amy in Casualty, has been dissatisfied with her size, else she would not have shed, at various times, up to four stone. 'My halo is quite shiny at the moment,' she says. 'I have used many different diets over the years, but the best, and the system I'm using at the moment, is simply a low-fat diet with more exercise. The important thing is to have realistic goals, as opposed to wanting to look like somebody on the front of Vogue. At the same time, being overweight should not be considered a weakness. It's about appetite. I have a great appetite for life, and that includes food and drink.' What are her particular passions? 'Full-fat cheese and Cadbury's Dairy Milk,' she says, almost forlornly but not quite.

War and Pearce

Jonathan Pearce loves football, as anyone will testify who has heard (make that been deafened by) his not-exactly-understated commentaries on Channel 5 or Capital Gold radio, but he also enjoys the respite from football provided by Robotwars. 'It's great fun,' he says. 'And I like the fact that it takes me away from football, which is becoming so cynical. I love football so much, and it's a huge part of my life, but I regret the way it is divorcing itself from the fans. You've still got fantastic competition in Robotwars, but it's much more innocent.' That said, I invite him to consider the similarities. 'Well, there are robots assembled at great cost, like Mortis, which cost £30,000, and others like 101, so called because it cost 101 pence to put together from scrap. So that's a bit like football. And you get robots with the speed of Ryan Giggs and the tackling ability of Roy Keane. You get someone steaming in for a tackle in football, and you get similar moves in Robotwars, although in football they don't normally carry flame-throwers.' Mmm. Not yet, anyway.

Whereas most football commentators are cagey about their own loyalties, Pearce happily owns up to being a Bristol City fan. Maybe that's why he became a commentator, I venture cheekily, so that he'd get the chance to see some decent football. A strange noise emanates from his body. I think it's a laugh but I'm not sure. Does Pearce have favourite robots? 'There's a red fur-lined, polka-dotted robot called Biotoir which I like very much,' he says – and if his tongue is in cheek, there's no obvious evidence. 'Robotwars is going to America in a big way,' he continues. 'You wonder what they'll come up with there? Probably some napalm-firing stealth bomber.' He is, I think, genuinely excited at the prospect.

HOME FRONT

Linda Barker grew up between Bradford and Halifax – not, in truth, a hotbed of style and chic, and yet she grew up to become a design guru, thanks to TV shows such as Changing Rooms. Why, I wonder, should we take her seriously?

What, for example, does her own house look like? 'It's open-plan on the ground floor, with lots of light and wooden floors leading through to stone,' she says. 'The paintwork is cream, with one baby-blue feature wall, lots of steel and frosted glass. And white roller blinds, no curtains.' OK, she's convinced me that she's a chic chick, so what are the no-nos of interior design? And please don't say kilim sofas, on which I've just spent a fortune. 'I think you can do anything you want. My eight-year-old daughter wanted her bedroom to look like a tropical rainforest, so I made that happen for her. I like minimal rooms, with clean lines, but not austere. But if you want the look of an old gentlemen's club, that's fine. You certainly wouldn't see swags and tails in my house, but I have a feeling that flock wallpaper might come back. I think it's quite fun.'

If there was one design classic that she could have in her house, what would it be? 'An Arne Jacobsen egg chair. But I can't justify spending £2000 on a chair. I'd rather go on holiday.' And one design project that she would love to undertake? 'I'd love to take an old building and transform it into a small hotel, but somewhere unfashionable ... like Dungeness.

Shooting from the hip

Jeff Green comes from Chester, breeding ground of some of the greatest names in British comedy. Well, Keith Harris and Orville, anyway. 'And Bob Mills. And Russ Abbot. He used to live at the end of our street.' But Green, 37, lives in London now, and so I ask him whether he misses the North of England? He ponders the question. 'I do sometimes think that London makes you a bit heartless,' he says. 'Just yesterday there was a pigeon walking towards me, looking for food. It had a limp. And – up north this would never have occurred to me – I looked at it and thought, "It's putting that on."'

I laugh. Green is a funny man, and Shoot the Messenger, a riotous new gameshow in which he is one of the team captains, is a great outlet for his talents. The show's premise is that the panellists, knowing there is a producer of cheap porn films somewhere in the audience, for example, must identify him. Or her. 'It's a laugh when you think you've got the guy who makes porn films and he turns out to be a vicar,' says Green. 'Although actually I got quite good at it.'

He can't dredge up any particular examples, because they shot 20 shows in 10 days and it's all a bit of a blur. 'It was quite a strain on the comedy muscle,' he says. Moreover, as soon as recording was finished he flew to Australia to do his stand-up act. He likes Australia. And Australians like him. 'I've actually got quite a big following there,' he says. 'Here, and even more so in America, you can do lots of telly and plenty of people have still never heard of you. But in Australia, if you do two shows on a Saturday evening then you're as famous as the Spice Girls. And they do like you to live up to their notions of the English. They think we go to bed with pyjamas on, wearing ties. I do nothing to wreck that image. All I have to do is change a couple of words here and there. I did a joke, about the myth that women are the weaker sex. "If you don't believe me, have you ever tried getting a duvet off a woman at four in the morning?" I said. And there was complete silence. Nobody laughed at all. Afterwards someone said, "What's this duvet thing?" In Australia they call them doonas. Once I knew that, the joke started working.'

NEIL SEAN

Apparently, plans to bring back Drop the Dead Donkey (Paramount Comedy Channel) are being discussed. The comedy, set in a TV newsroom and starring Stephen Tompkinson and Neil Pearson, won many awards in the 1990s. We can reveal that the original production team feel that there is now enough fresh material to bring it back. One insider says, 'We've now got a whole new set of topical issues to poke fun at and we're raring to go.'

Ainsley Harriott, star of Ainsley's Meals in Minutes and Ready, Steady, Cook (UK Style) has a secret ambition: 'I would love to be in a musical,' the singing chef reveals. 'My father was a great piano player and he taught me to love music. Not many people know that I started on the comedy circuit, and if I hadn't been successful as a chef I would love to have graced the boards in a Harry Belafonte-type role!'

Fresh from his success with hit films Pearl Harbor and Gone in Sixty Seconds, the handiwork of top US producer Jerry Bruckheimer can be seen on TV in the crime show CSI: Crime Scene Investigation. Look out on Living next month for brand new episodes of the series that follows forensic experts in Las Vegas.

Hear'Say, the band that needs no introduction, will star in an exclusive Sky Box Office concert this month. This extravaganza will be broadcast live from MEN Arena, Manchester, and will cost £9.99. Be sure not to miss them performing their irrepressibly catchy hits Pure & Simple and The Way to Your Love. Word is there could be a few surprises in store, too.

IN PRODUCTION

Fooled you!

Could you blag your way into a showbiz party? Gatecrashers can! Interview: Kylie Northover

Throughout the summer, three professional uninvited guests have been blagging their way around the country for a new series of ITV2's Gatecrashers, to screen in October.

The three gatecrashers, who remain anonymous, put their powers of persuasion to the test as they blagged their way across the nation.

Their inspiration came from an eventful trip where the two original members tailed a journalist around the Cannes Film Festival.

'We tried to blag our way into a lot of parties, but it was very hard, as we didn't look the part,' explains Gatecrasher Number One. 'So we got a proper camera, convinced the press office we were journalists and then we got into all the coolest parties.'

They showed a tape of their work to ITV2, who promptly commissioned a six-part series. In that first series, the pair pulled off some outrageous stunts, including crashing the star-studded film premiere party for the Hugh Grant and Julia Roberts blockbuster Notting Hill. 'We also persuaded the people of Marlborough that we were going to stage a running-of-the-bulls-type event through the middle of their town,' he adds, chuckling.

In the second series, the missions are harder, and the original Gatecrashers have recruited a third blagger: 'a girl, which gives us an extra dimension!'

This time it's a 12-part series, which means 12 brilliantly conceived spoofs, blags and pranks – but due to the nature of the programme, we can't reveal any of them.

'We're different to other blagging and spoof shows – unlike Dom Joly (Trigger Happy TV), we have different personas each time and we get expert advice, and make sure we've got all the right lingo,' Gatecrasher Number One says.

'You'll see us setting up and getting ready for the blag or spoof – which can be quite stressful – the execution of the gag, and then the aftermath!'

But he can't give any clues as to who has been fooled.

'We've met royalty ... but that's all I can say!'

Fans of REM are sure to be 'shiny happy people' – the Georgia band released their 12th studio album Reveal earlier this year, and MTV now plan to screen the UK premiere of REM – Unplugged next month.

"New Vaporesse saved our marriage"

Mr. and Mrs. Paisley iron out their problems

By JOHN TWEEDY, Chief Correspondent

Comfort VAPORESSE could well spell the end of marriage guidance.

Without it one couple would certainly have been heading straight for the divorce courts. "Our marriage had really lost its spark," said Gary Paisley (100% cotton), "but then this Vaporesse came out and everything changed."

So what's behind the Vaporesse success? Experts claim it's because Vaporesse is one of the FIRST EVER fabric fragrances to be poured into the iron and infused through steam. The result is fresh-smelling fabric that, for this couple at least, proved absolutely irresistible. And according to Gary "the effects last a LONG, LONG time."

Veronica Paisley (40°C machine washable) had only this to say: "Grrrrrrrrrr".

Up-to-the-minute scientific discoveries and advanced animation combine to bring dinosaurs to life in a visually stunning new programme. Words: Kylie Northover

WILD THINGS

Jurassic Park* made household names of many dinosaurs, but this month Discovery Channel reveals two new, never-before-seen species of dinosaur in the ground-breaking programme When Dinosaurs Roamed.

Palaeontologists recently uncovered two new North American dinosaurs; a raptor-like carnivore with feathers, and a bizarre, beaked plant-eater. The pair are some of the first dinosaur finds from the Cretaceous Gap, a gap in North American history, some 105-75 million years ago, from which no dinosaur species have been found until now. New information was also recently discovered on the little-known zuniceratops, which can also be glimpsed for the first time in the programme.

Using even more amazing technical wizardry than the critically acclaimed Walking with Dinosaurs, this catapults viewers back to the Cretaceous period, with striking animated re-creations.

Covering five prehistoric periods from the Triassic to the late-Cretaceous, the programme aims to give viewers a guided tour of the lives of dinosaurs, their anatomy, their lifestyle and their often dramatic deaths, drawing on the new scientific findings. Mixing animation and real environments, the programme almost has the feel of a David Attenborough-style wildlife documentary – but you're not likely to see any of these creatures on safari.

As executive producer Tomi Landis explains, When Dinosaurs Roamed, narrated by actor John Goodman, is part documentary, part feature film, combining scientific evidence with advanced computer animation to recreate dinosaur sights and sounds.

Lizard kings: the prehistoric stars of When Dinosaurs Roamed in all their amazing, animated glory

'We knew that dinosaurs were popular already – I think they capture the imagination of kids and adults alike,' Landis says.

'But we determined that it was important for us to find new science surrounding dinosaurs and put together a story based on these newly found species.'

Working closely with a team of leading palaeontologists, the film-makers used state-of-the-art, high-definition cameras and sound, combined with some of the industry's top animators, to bring prehistory to life.

'We wanted the programme to have the feel of a film, and the director used a lot of feature film techniques for the background images,' Landis explains.

'We used a new invention, Cablecam, that we swing through an environment, allowing the viewer to move along with the dinosaur – in one scene, we have the camera point of view of a tyrannosaurus, and the camera is actually moving at the speed of the T-Rex. There's also a lot of detail, and we shot on a high-definition format – it's what George Lucas used to shoot the fifth Star Wars movie.' But the hardest part of bringing the ancient beasts to the screen was the complex animation.

'We had top-notch animators working with us, many of whom have worked for Disney and [George Lucas's] LucasFilms,' says Landis. 'We also worked very closely with palaeontologists, and we checked in with them throughout the process, to ensure our dinosaurs were looking anatomically correct, from the beginning right through to the final visualisation.'

The director of the 100-plus animation team, Don Waller, who has worked on several dinosaur-related projects, including Jurassic Park, says that the recent scientific discoveries have changed animators' notions of what dinosaurs looked like.

'Discoveries have taught us that dinosaurs had feathers that were very coarse, almost needle-like. Getting the feathers to blend in order to make them look pin-like was a particular challenge,' he says.

The animating process was also different to anything ever done before.

'In Walking with Dinosaurs, the animators used animatronic puppets in combination with computer-generated imagery and background locations to present a complete prehistoric ecosystem,' Waller says. 'We've simply taken the puppetry out of the formula, which I think gives it a very realistic effect. We wanted viewers to feel as if these animals truly roamed through their backyards.'

As well as the painstaking process of creating each individual feather on each dinosaur, the animators faced other challenges when it came to recreating prehistory.

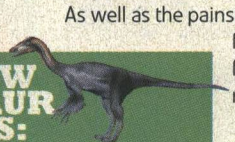
'Since we wanted to integrate the animals as much as possible into the landscape to give them a realistic look, the lighting was challenging. I think we were able to overcome this difficulty and present a seamless look.

'In the field of animation, Jurassic Park was a stunning achievement. However, it was fictional and consisted of significantly less computer imagery than When Dinosaurs Roamed. Since we are dealing with an 86-minute wildlife documentary, our animation, based on scientifically accurate information, makes advances in the areas of muscular movement and texture of skin. Also, computers these days are much faster and the equipment has progressed to a point where what would have taken years before, now takes six months.'

In that six months, the animators manage to transport viewers back 100 million years. 'We want to immerse our audience in the world of dinosaurs,' Landis says.

'We want them to feel they are there.'

THE NEW DINOSAUR SPECIES:



•COELUROSAUR (yet to be officially named): This bipedal meat-eater was a theropod (two-legged carnivores with grasping hands and clawed digits) and stood approximately three feet tall and seven feet long.

•NOTHRONYCHUS: A bizarre looking therizinosaur (a medium to large bipedal herbivore with long arms, clawed fingers, stout hind limbs, broad feet with claws, a short tail and a body covered in protofeathers), the nothronychus had a long neck, but stood on two legs and had a shaggy coat.

•ZUNICERATOPS CHRISTOPHERI: An early relative of the triceratops, zuniceratops is the earliest plant-eating, quadripedal ornithischian dinosaur with bony frills along the back of its skull. Discovered in 1999, this is the first time the creature has been accurately animated.

INTO the BLACK

As the third and final season of the cult crime series Millennium premieres on Sci-Fi, Thomas Simpson catches up with its star, Lance Henriksen

'MILLENNIUM DID EXACTLY WHAT it was supposed to do,' Lance Henriksen reflects, looking back over his three years playing former FBI profiler Frank Black. The third and final year of the off-the-wall investigative series comes to Sci-Fi this month, giving viewers a chance to find out how Black deals with his new challenges – he's a single parent, back working with the FBI, and still trying to understand exactly what it is that the mysterious Millennium Group are trying to achieve. 'There are some of those episodes where we stood back and went, "Wow, we got a lot done in that show,"' he recalls.

Henriksen's career has seen him play numerous roles on stage and screen, including Sergeant Neff, who looked after the young anti-Christ in Damien: Omen II, and Bishop, the android who comes through for Ripley in James Cameron's epic thriller Aliens. The actor enjoyed working on that movie so much that he obtained the staircase from the set, and it is now a feature in his home high in the hills above Los Angeles. Constantly in demand for movie roles – he has been in almost 80 films – it was quite a coup for the series' creator Chris Carter when he persuaded Henriksen to take on the part. 'Lance has that lived-in face that's seen the world,' Carter commented during the filming of the series.

Frank Black was Henriksen's first regular role in episodic television, and he admits that he took on the role partly to work with Chris Carter, who was then riding high on the success of The X-Files, and also because of the nature of the part itself; Frank Black represented a challenge. 'I have so much respect for the Academy Group, which is based in Virginia,' he says. 'They're guys who were in the FBI and they created profiling. When I met those guys, I was so thrilled that they existed and I was going to play one of them.'

Henriksen sees Black as a chess player. 'He's seeing moves that have gone on that nobody else is noticing,' he explains. 'It doesn't make him more than or less than anybody – nor does it make him crazy. It just means that he sees things in a different way. A farmer could walk in and look at my land, and he could tell you the last time that it was planted, what would grow there, why it won't, and what you would have to do to make it grow.'

He also enjoyed the Sherlock Holmes elements of Black's character. 'He is speaking for the dead, who can't defend themselves. In a trial, the dead person is often attacked, and they can't fight back. Every time that argument comes up, I want to see them wheel the carcass in and ask them the questions. Frank Black is doing that – he is raising the stakes.'

Henriksen maintains that 'a week into any production, I know as much about a character as the writer did.' With the production of Millennium spanning nine months of each of its three years, the actor was able to get underneath Frank Black's skin, despite the constant changes in the set-up around him. He laughs, though, as he points out that 'the worst sight for a television producer is an actor with a script under his arm. They don't want to know what we think of their scripts. They just want us to do them. When you're doing a series, they send you 22 scripts in a year, and you can't say no to one of them. The thought of an actor writing is enough to make their hair fall out!'

He would also be willing to return to the grind of episodic television, but only if the right material came along. 'I would have to really believe in it,' he says bluntly. 'I felt that Chris Carter wanting to do Millennium was so courageous. He was the only guy who could have got it done, and I was happy to be part of it. I think it succeeded – and we went for three years.'

Game for a laugh

He's made his name presenting gameshows, and he still can't get enough of them. Jane Oddy quizzes Paul Ross as he launches his latest venture with Challenge TV

FOR A MAN WHO describes himself as 'a shorter, uglier and cheaper' version of his ubiquitous younger brother, Jonathan, Paul Ross plainly revels in his role as a self-styled gameshow king.

His latest offering, It's Anybody's Guess, kicks off on Challenge TV this month and he returns with the sadistic Endurance UK on Japanese Weekend.

Working on gameshows has given Ross a healthy living: 'Honestly, I love them! I come from a horrible family of hideous trivia show-offs,' he explains. 'I'm the eldest of six and as a family we were always doing general knowledge quizzes in papers and showing off about obscure facts and figures. We always did well in exams because we have magpie memories and remembered everything.'

But 44-year-old Ross reckons contestants who take part in It's Anybody's Guess don't need an encyclopaedic brain to win because the obscure factual questions rely on logic and common sense: 'For example, do you know when the flushing toilet was invented?' he asks. 'It was in the 16th century and you won't forget that in a hurry!'

Three teams compete in each game, made up of a member of the public and a celebrity, and Ross says he has more understanding of the contestants' strengths and weaknesses because he often has a mental blank himself.

'I've got a retentive memory but I do forget things too. I'm not interested in science, sport or geography so I struggle with those type of questions, but I'm very good on literature, movies, old TV shows and history, and I'm not bad on current affairs.'

Sharp and funny with high-octane energy, Ross has worked in front of and behind the camera for some 18 years, yet he insists he fell into TV by accident: 'If Jonathan hadn't made it, nobody would have asked me in front of the camera. I started presenting serious stuff, then they realised I was a big show-off.'

Like Jonathan, he has a love of sharp suits and ties and has the gift of the gab, which has made him ideal for fast-paced TV trivia shows: 'I worked out the other day that I've hosted almost 600 episodes of different gameshows over the last five years, but I've never been bored because they've all been so different.'

Not surprisingly, his favourite show is the anarchic Endurance UK, in which he shamelessly calls himself 'the ringmaster from hell'. Creating challenges more revolting than the last series was not easy for the producers, and Ross agrees he needed a strong stomach during filming – and an understanding dry-cleaner for his splattered suits.

'Contestants get covered in maggots and cow manure or go bobbing for false teeth in a loo. In the first series I had to French kiss a dead fish and let a slug crawl across my tongue. It's fantastic telly and the most fun I've ever had.'

Now separated from his long-time wife, Kerry, he has a new girlfriend but he is reluctant to talk about her.

'I'm a micro-celebrity so if something happens in my life, good or bad, people want to hear about it, but I have my children's feelings to consider.'

He remains a devoted dad to the couple's four daughters and spends every weekend with them in West Sussex and the rest of the time in his flat in south-east London.

Family is all-important to him. His brother, Simon, and his sister-in-law, Amanda, devised and produced It's Anybody's Guess. He is close to Jonathan, who he hopes will be a guest celebrity on the next series.

His other brothers, Adam and Miles, also work in the media and sister Lisa was once a presenter: 'We're like the Dimblebys on acid! We see each other a lot now we've all got children. There are so many grandchildren my mum has a birthday bash every other week!'

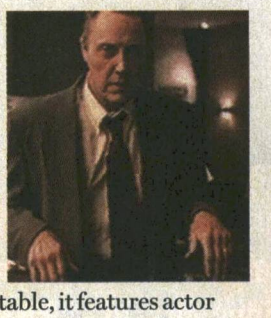
Will Britpop mop up?

As Brighton's own Fatboy Slim tops the nominations for the 2001 MTV Video Music Awards, Tina Ogle sizes up the six acts flying the flag at this year's star-studded ceremony in New York

FATBOY SLIM
WEAPON OF CHOICE

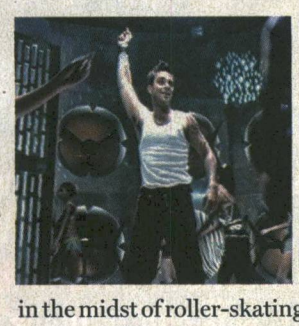


Fatboy Slim, otherwise known as Norman Cook, scored a staggering nine nominations for the video for this single from the album Halfway Between the Gutter and the Stars. Eerie and unforgettable, it features actor Christopher Walken (pictured) dancing around a deserted Los Angeles hotel as the tune plays on the radio. Directed by Spike Jonze, the man responsible for the film Being John Malkovich, this hilarious video took just two days to shoot.

LIVE

2001 MTV Video Music Awards

MTV, Thursday 6th, 1.00am, repeated Friday 7th, 9.00pm



ROBBIE WILLIAMS
ROCK DJ

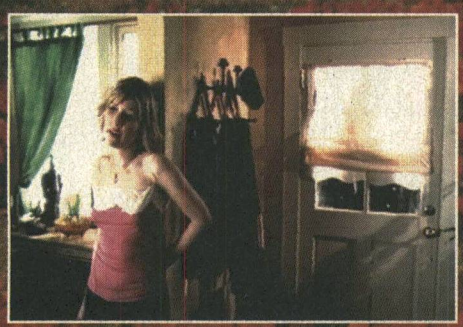
The Stoke wonderboy received three nominations for this grisly spectacular. Beginning conventionally enough with Robbie dancing in the midst of roller-skating babes, it ends with him peeling off his own skin and tossing his vital organs to the crowd. Bizarre and cheeky, this may well win him Best Male Video, Breakthrough Video or at the very least, a Special Effects award.

DAVID GRAY BABYLON

The man whose music is now played at dinner parties worldwide has a shot at Best New Artist with the video to accompany Babylon. The 31-year-old from South Wales, who specialises in intelligent love songs, strums his way around the Tube, caffs, pubs and fish and chip shops in this ode to London life.

GORILLAZ CLINT EASTWOOD

Is it a band? Is it a joke? The UK's first virtual band, dreamed up by Blur frontman Damon Albarn and Tank Girl creator Jamie Hewlett, gets two nominations for this animated effort. They very publicly tried to turn down their nomination for the Mercury Music Prize. Are Murdoc, 2D, Russel and Noodle ready to win for Best Art Direction or Breakthrough Video? Expect cartoon tantrums on the night.



Sing when you're winning? Robbie Williams is up for three awards. Inset: Wistful vocalist Dido wants to Thank You for her nod in the Best Female Video category. Right: Funk soul brother Fatboy Slim has earned a whopping nine nominations

COLDPLAY YELLOW

Whether or not you consider them bedsit miserablists, Coldplay made a huge splash with their Parachutes album and this single has them nominated for Best New Artist in a Video. 'Look at the stars, look how they shine for you,' intones vocalist Chris Martin, mooching along a desolate winter beach in the rain. It's neither glamorous nor inventive, but it has obviously struck a chord.

DIDO THANK YOU

Former literary agent Dido's already promising singing career was given an enormous boost when controversial rapper Eminem sampled her song Thank You on Stan, his track about an obsessive fan. Dido appears in Eminem's video – which is up for five awards – as Stan's pregnant girlfriend, but she also receives her own nomination as Best Female for Thank You.

Presenting a magnificent tribute to the beloved literary artistry of Emily Brontë.

Say Cleese!

Since Monty Python's Flying Circus first appeared in 1969, the series has been proclaimed a work of genius. Brian Viner meets a giant of comedy, former Python John Cleese

JOHN CLEESE HATES THE man from the Ministry of Silly Walks, which is curious on two counts. One, because he was that man. And two, because the man from the ministry was one of the most popular items on Monty Python's Flying Circus – which returns to Paramount Comedy Channel this month.

It is often said of Cleese that he has got much more serious in his old age (he turns 62 next month, but habitually refers to himself as an old man). It is true that he has been made a visiting professor by Cornell University in America, where he gives lectures on subjects such as animal conservation, and never, ever, enters the lecture theatre with a silly walk. But there is nothing new about his loathing for the rubber-legged man from the ministry. He always felt that way.

'I never thought it was funny,' he tells me. 'We did it on the stage tour in Southampton where it laid a total egg. Imagine walking round like that and not getting any laughs? I said to the other guys, "This doesn't work," but they persuaded me to do it the following night in Brighton, where the audience roared with laughter and my heart sank. I was saddled with the bloody thing. It's probably why I've had to have a hip replacement.'

Cleese roars with laughter. 'I still find some of the Python stuff hilarious,' he adds. 'And some of it I not only don't find funny, I can't figure out why we ever thought it might have been. But I don't keep it in my head. When Michael [Palin] and I had to do the parrot sketch on Saturday Night Live in America, to publicise [the A Fish Called Wanda sequel] Fierce Creatures, we sat in a restaurant beforehand trying to remember the lines.

'My only complaint about comedy is that you don't learn anything'

NOW SHOWING

Monty Python's Flying Circus, Paramount Comedy Channel, Mondays-Thursdays 11.30pm

I said to Michael, "Why don't we just go out and ask somebody?"'

It's an interesting point. There are countless Python fans who long ago committed the dead parrot sketch to memory, and have never forgotten it. But Cleese has other fish to fry, and they're not all called Wanda. He is playing Nearly Headless Nick in the new Harry Potter film, but still wants to make a TV series about the meaning of life. Is he, as one recent newspaper profile cuttingly put it, trying to rewrite his obituary before it's too late? I don't think so, in fact I say to him supportively, if somewhat crawlingly, that a profusion of interests surely begets better comedy.

'That's absolutely right. It was hugely helpful, when I came to write Fawlty Towers, that I had started to write management training films. It made me look at the service industry more analytically. In fact, shortly before Are You Being Served? came out, I thought to myself that I should set a comedy in a department store. And a series of essays on happiness by Bertrand Russell gave me masses of comedy ideas, because good comedy is about good ideas. The best Python comedy was Life of Brian, all about religious ideas, and if we hadn't done a bit of thinking about religion over the years we couldn't have been funny about it. You've got to allow people latitude.

'My only complaint about comedy is that you don't learn anything,' he adds. 'It's like Steve Davis playing snooker, you just have this skill and go out and do it every day, and it's sometimes hard to say why, except for the bank balance.' Which, of course, is extremely healthy. And so is he, apart from the odd hip replacement – possibly the legacy of too many silly walks.

LETTER OF THE MONTH

What a performance

I saw La Fille mal gardée on Performance Channel, filmed at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden. It's a nice change to watch a ballet midweek instead of the usual programmes, and I find you get to see more in the comfort of your own home.

Also, Inside the Actor's Studio is interesting as the actors being interviewed show who they really are, as well as how they got to be where they are today.

It's good to know that there is some different viewing to be seen out there!

Clare Shedden, Tyne and Wear

Congratulations, you've won £50!

KINDRED SPIRIT

I would be grateful if you would inform me if The Kindred is likely to be shown again in the near future on Sky One.

Eve Shepherd, e-mail

Unfortunately, Eve, Sky One informs us the channel's licence for The Kindred has come to an end, so it will not be shown any more on Sky One.

THE SUNSHINE OF MY LIFE

I just wanted to thank Sky One for showing Reps in Ibiza. I went to Ibiza a couple of years ago on a 20s holiday and I was surprised to see so many familiar faces.

Ibiza is particularly special because while I was there I met the man who is now my husband. Watching the show bought back so many wonderful memories.

J Shepherd, Surrey

COMING SOON: THE TOUGH STUFF

Can you please tell me if Sky One is planning to show the new WWF series Tough Enough in the future?

M Michaels, e-mail

A Sky One spokesperson replies: 'We certainly are! WWF Tough Enough will be coming to Sky One very soon, so keep an eye out for more news.'

THE USA FACTOR

Fear Factor on Sky One is one of the best programmes on TV this month. It is great to watch people face their worst fears for $50,000; grown muscular men screaming like little girls is so funny.

I was wondering if Sky One is going to get any other American programmes in soon, like Mad TV, which is on Fox, One Life to Live on ABC, and, the best of all, The Chris Rock Show, which is on HBO.

All of these programmes I enjoyed watching on my latest trip to America.

Jon Stuart, e-mail

Sorry, Jon, Sky One tells us that there are currently no plans to show Mad TV, One Life To Live or The Chris Rock Show.

LOOKING FOR DIVINE INSPIRATION

My mum and I are both big fans of The Vicar of Dibley. Could you please tell me where I can obtain a copy of the theme tune, as it is a lovely version of The Lord's My Shepherd?

Paul and Anne Winfield, e-mail

UK Gold informs us that the theme tune was composed by Howard Goodall and performed by the choir of Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford. The song was released as a double A-side, with the Mr Bean theme tune, by London Records (ref: DIBCD1). With any luck, your local record store should be able to find you a copy. Series one of The Vicar of Dibley shows on UK Gold this month, from Thursday 6th at 9.40pm.

'I have always been a huge fan of the US black comedy *M*A*S*H*. Are there any plans to screen this first-class programme?'

S-MASH HIT TV

I have always been a huge fan of the US black comedy, *M*A*S*H*. I remember watching the show on Sky One a few years ago. Are there any plans to screen this first-class programme in the future?

Des Dwyer, e-mail

Good news, Des, though you might want to set the video! There's a welcome return for Hawkeye and the gang as *M*A*S*H* is playing once again on Sky One, with a double bill every weekday, except Tuesday, from 2.40am throughout September.

THE FINALE SHOWDOWN

I am a keen follower of some of the cult TV shown by Sky One, and so far this year, the final scenes in season finales have been shown in trailers for Buffy the Vampire Slayer, Angel, Dark Angel and Roswell.

Although I can appreciate Sky One must try to encourage as many viewers as possible to watch these end-of-season programmes, surely it should not be to the detriment of dedicated fans like myself who have watched all year wondering what the outcome is to be. Please, in future, bear people like me in mind, and if you cannot avoid 'spoilers' then at least have the decency not to show the closing sequence of the entire season in the trailer!

Jacqueline Easton, e-mail

A Sky One spokesperson responds: 'When promoting any programme, a great deal of planning goes into the direction that a campaign will take. There are many ways that we could have promoted the finale of, for example, Buffy. However, rather than promoting just another finale, we wanted to tease out this potentially fatal conclusion, so that fans realised that this would be a must-see end to the series, and the reason to watch was to find out what exactly happened to get to that point. A similar strategy was used in the BBC campaign for EastEnders, where the climax of Phil Mitchell being shot was actually promoted before the episode. We take all of our viewers' comments very seriously and are very sorry that you were disappointed by these trailers, but we hope that we have answered some of your questions relating to the reasoning behind its approach.'

Photos: BSkyB, UK Gold, Bill Cooper

THE LUSCIOUS JOSH

I am writing with regards to the gorgeous Josh Hartnett! I recently saw half of the film Here on Earth, starring the stud, on Front Row, but missed the further showings. When will Here On Earth be on again, and when is Pearl Harbor likely to premiere on cable?
Lauren, e-mail

Keep an eye out for Here on Earth on one of the film channels, Lauren, and in the meantime you can see Josh in The Faculty on Sky MovieMax on Tuesday 18th. Pearl Harbor is due to premiere on Front Row next summer.

A SHOW THAT FITS THE BILL

Being a big fan of The Hulk, starring Bill Bixby, as a child I was thrilled when Sci-Fi aired it. But lately it has disappeared. Is there any chance it will be aired again?

I also noticed A&E in America is showing the Bill Bixby biography. I was gutted that we don't have this. Is there any chance that one of the stations could show this?
Paul King, e-mail

A Sci-Fi spokesperson tells us that The Hulk may return to the channel next year, Paul.

THIRD TIME LUCKY?

After sighing with relief on finding out Buffy, Angel and Dark Angel are returning, it occurred to me that my other favourite show, Roswell, has never been mentioned. Is it returning for a third series? And will it be on Sky One?
Michelle Robinson, e-mail

The third series of Roswell (pictured, below) is on the way, and it is likely to be on Sky One. Keep an eye out for more news.

CABLE GUIDE RULES

When I first picked up July's issue of Cable Guide I thought, 'wow, nice cover, but there's something slightly different about this'. Then I opened it and was amazed and impressed. In my opinion, I think the new look is much better than the old one and easier to read. It may take time to get used to what page the channel I'm looking for is on, but it still rules.
Adz, e-mail

BEVERLY HILLS NO MORE

Please could you let me know when the new series of Beverly Hills, 90210 will be returning to Sky One?
Pat Alcee, e-mail

A Sky One spokesperson replies: 'Sky One has actually aired all of the Beverly Hills, 90210 series we had under licence, so we will not be playing any more episodes.'

SIMPSONS JUST GETS BETTER

In reference to Samuel Edwards' letter in July's issue about the quality of the new Simpsons episodes, maybe you have been watching different Simpsons episodes to me. I think The Simpsons is the only show on TV that gets better with age, unlike other older shows such as Friends (which is just not funny anymore) and The X-Files (now more irritating than interesting). If there has been a change in the writers, as you asked, I congratulate them on a fantastic show.

Just what is it that the big car makers are trying to say with their advertising slogans? Vicki ponders some of the most famous motoring one-liners

MOTOR MOTTOS

CARS WITH A FEW FLASH LINES

THERE ARE NOT A lot of changes on my weekly two-hour run to the Top Gear GTi office in Birmingham. The M6 seems to contain the same tailbacks, the same weather and the same passing views.

But the scenery has had a little change of late. Well, a blooming great big one actually, because Ford has draped a massive advertisement over the entire old Dunlop factory by the side of the motorway. Under the biggest picture you'll ever see of a Mondeo is the company's slogan, 'Built to Lead'.

But lead what, exactly? Sheep? No, obviously not. But it got me thinking about other manufacturers' sign-off statements.

Mercedes has a series of TV adverts with the line 'For whoever you are'. This is to underline the fact that in its extensive model range, there is a Mercedes to suit you, whether you're a parent or a single socialite.

But it can be misread to leave you thinking Mercedes doesn't give a damn who you are, so long as you put money in their coffers.

Citroën claims, 'Nothing moves you like a Citroën'. Well, taken literally, my advice is, beware all curry-eaters. As far as I know, the combination of a tikka masala and driving a Citroën has yet to be tested.

Then there's Vauxhall. They are, apparently, 'Raising the Standard'. But what is the standard? Vauxhall's one-liner leaves you wondering if the 'standard' is rock-bottom, and it's from there that the company is rising.

Toyota tells us that 'the car in front is a Toyota'. Not the best choice of words either, because my personal experiences of Toyotas in front have come from them either barging in or holding everyone up.

It is staggering to think that these rallying cries are the best that well-paid marketing people can come up with. I'm not suggesting that I could conceive something memorable, but then, I'm not paid to do so.

A few companies take the 'simple is best' approach, with two of the less pretentious mottos being Volvo's 'For Life' and Subaru's 'Proven the World Over'. But I think the best is one of the oldest. It's a clever play on words and is from – drumroll, please – Land Rover. The claim is that their motors are 'the best 4x4xfar'.

Simple, but bang-on.

Impressing guests at the dinner table needn't mean entertaining stress levels in the kitchen. As Ross explains, there are plenty of ways to create home-made food without cooking up a fuss

UK STYLE

Catch Ross on Ready, Steady, Cook, Monday 3rd, 8.00pm

HOW MANY PEOPLE FORGO the pleasures of entertaining because they get in a fluster when there's more than beans on toast to do?

A dinner party needn't be a chore; cooking for loved ones is the greatest joy of my life, and once one embraces the notion of being seated with people, breaking bread, it can be addictive.

However, while espousing the joys of the table, I do know that most of us lead busy lives and time is at a premium. Which means two things: one, that food has to be quick to prepare; and two, that whoever is playing the role of caterer shouldn't be stuck in the galley for the whole voyage.

I'm a great lover of one-pot meals and serving at the table. Soups are ace as they're full of flavour and can be ladled out at the table with a sprinkling of croutons or toasted pumpkin seeds. Similarly, a stew or Thai curry is delicious, and the stew can be made the day before and often improves on reheating. A cake sliced at the table and served with thick cream always slips down and can be made in advance.

Obviously, with shops now crammed with 'convenience' foods we can treat our friends to bought-in goodies, and with a little judicious cheating, the illusion of effort can be maintained. Supermarket soups just need a little jazzing up – some fresh herbs snipped in or a little more of the original ingredient added to change the texture. Try adding some steamed, grated carrot and fresh coriander leaves into carrot and coriander soup. Hey presto, home-made!

A bought tart case filled with a little whipped cream and piled with soft fruits in season, served with appropriate ice cream, is a winner. I love raspberry tart with stem ginger ice cream; just allow some good quality ice cream to soften, scrape in a few fresh vanilla seeds, chop in a few chunks of stem ginger in syrup, stir and re-freeze. Abracadabra, home-made ginger ice cream!

Salads are made for entertaining; a bag of pre-washed leaves can become a first course or starter very easily. Fry some thick lardons of good British bacon until crispy and put aside. Toast some sunflower seeds in the oil, then glaze the pan with a little raspberry vinegar to make a hot vinaigrette. Toss altogether and, voilà, you have a warm salad.

The recipe below is so fantastic; it takes five hours to cook but once you've thrown it together, which takes five minutes, you can get on with the rest of the day. The lamb just spoons off the bone and is delicious, and even better the following day.

So, cheat if you feel you must, but call those friends and family today and break bread – it's much more fun than an e-mail.

SLOW-COOKED SHOULDER OF LAMB WITH OLIVES

1 shoulder of lamb, about 2kg
2 x 400g tins of cannellini beans
1 x 400g tin of chopped tomatoes in juice
400ml dry white wine
2 large onions, finely sliced
1 head of garlic, peeled
12 shallots, peeled
2 bay leaves
Couple of branches of thyme
20 black olives, pitted
4 anchovies, filleted

Cook's notes:
If you cover the shallots for 2 minutes with boiling water, they'll be easier to peel. Don't buy pitted black olives – they're green ones dyed black. The anchovies just dissolve in to the sauce as seasoning.

Place the lamb in a lidded casserole dish and add the rest of the ingredients. Season with loads of black pepper, cover and oven cook at 140°C for 4 hours. Remove the lid and allow the meat to brown for a further hour. Serve the tender meat in flat soup plates with crusty bread and a salad.

Double TROUBLE

When The Cramp Twins crash-land onto Cartoon Network this month, be prepared for punch-ups aplenty as the match made in hell proves that opposites attack!

So, you think you hate your brother or sister? That's nothing compared to Warren and Lucien Cramp, twins who have nothing in common but their birthday. While Wayne, best described as borderline psychotic, has one mission: to harass Lucien, or 'girlpants' as he calls him, Lucien is a sensitive type, who loves knitting, is eager to please, and environmentally friendly. Is it any wonder they spend all their time fighting? What's even more worrying is that the man who created the sibling rivals, illustrator Brian Wood, admits that he based the twins on real people. 'I guess all works of fiction come from real life at some level and the Cramps are no exception,' he says. But the similarities between Brian's life and his cartoon characters don't end there: 'The swamp is based on the bit of contaminated wasteland that was at the bottom of our garden and Haz Chem [the factory where half of Soap City works], is based on the local pickle factory, which turned the 'swamp' a different colour each day depending on what pickle they were making. Beetroot day was particularly scary,' he says. 'Seeing the characters move, talk and interact was a thrill,' says Brian, who first brought the Cramps to life in book form. 'I'm an animated film-maker and I always thought the book would make a good cartoon.' So, what misadventures can we expect to see the twins involved in? 'Misadventures is right – you can expect to see Lucien learn to 'love' his bathroom in Great Bowl of Fear, and Wayne to fulfil a lifetime ambition to become a monster in Wolfman Wayne.' cg

The Cramp Twins, Cartoon Network, daily from Monday 3rd, 4.30pm, and weekends, 9.30am

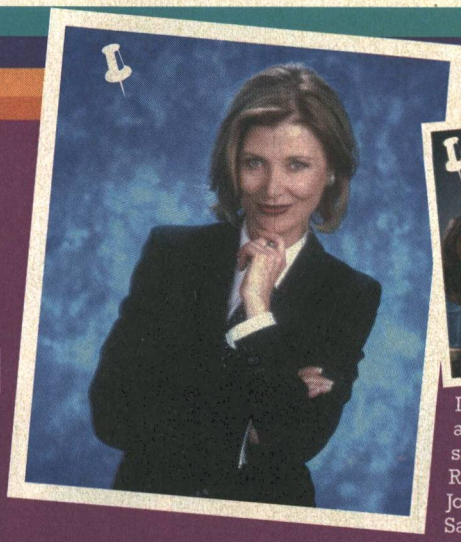
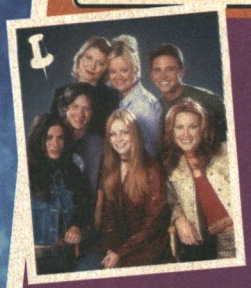
Bewitching Beth





Left: Beth Broderick, and above, with on-screen sister Hilda (Caroline Rhea), Sabrina (Melissa Joan Hart), and some of Sabrina's school friends

Yes, it's Sabrina September! And as you're about to be spoilt for choice with Sabrina the Teenage Witch, Kip caught up with actress Beth Broderick, better known as Aunt Zelda

Charming Beth Broderick might seem an unlikely candidate to play a witch, but playing Aunt Zelda for the last five years has been magical. 'I get to work with some very funny people … and it's nice to do something that kids appreciate,' she says.

The show is about 16-year-old Sabrina Spellman, who is told by her two aunts, Zelda and Hilda, that she, and they, and her whole family on her father's side, are witches. So she lives with them while preparing to receive her witch licence and along the way she gets into many scrapes trying to figure out her spells.

'Yes, I think there are a few [witches] around, and there are some good ones'

Rather fittingly, it's spooky how Beth got the part of Zelda: 'I was meant to read for Hilda, but when I went to the audition, I was in the lobby and I saw Caroline (Rhea), and I just knew that she should be reading for Hilda … so I asked if I could read for [Zelda] too. And the rest is history.'

Such an indisputable case of sixth sense certainly didn't unsettle Beth, a firm believer in witches. 'Yes, I think there are a few around, and there are some good ones. I just hope they like what we do on Sabrina,' she says.

Spellbound by acting at the age of nine, Beth went on to study at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts before starting her career in New York. But back in the early days Beth's parents weren't very happy about her career choice. 'They wanted me to be something more academic, like a scientist or a novelist.'

So, if Beth could perform spells, what would she do? 'I'd make all the poverty in the world disappear.' Obviously, Beth's a good witch.

FEELIN' VINE

When Disney decided to re-create the legend of Edgar Rice Burroughs' classic Tarzan, animator Glen Keane headed to the heart of Africa. Interview: Hilary Bonner

As one of the greatest stories ever written, the challenge for Disney when they decided to make a cartoon version of the legend of Tarzan was to produce something that was different from all that had gone before.

Top Hollywood animator Glen Keane was called in to turn the famous tale of the orphaned infant raised by gorillas into something unique, but the task was a tough one. Tarzan is the second most filmed subject in Hollywood history, exceeded only by Dracula, and there had been no less than 49 previous (English language) movie adaptations. Keane, however, knew he wanted to do the project.

'I realised that in creating a cartoon Tarzan we had a wonderful opportunity to do something that had never been done before,' he says.

Keane wanted Tarzan to move like an animal, so before drawing a line he took off for Africa to study how gorillas moved. 'But I actually discovered and learned much more than that,' he says. 'I went to Uganda with my son, Max, and we were trudging through this impenetrable forest when the guide suddenly said, "Get your camera out." Ahead of us were two families of gorillas. I took out my sketchbook and you could see the guide thinking, "This fool, he forgot his camera." But I just wanted to draw.

'This big silver-back gorilla had a harem of about 16 females, just like in Tarzan. It was a peaceful, wonderful little paradise of gorillas. Not far from there, in Rwanda, the war was going on, but here there was this unique peace. The females and the baby gorillas were all playing, trying to grab each other's hair, just enjoying themselves. But that big male silver-back was watchful all the time, he was their anchor.

King of the swingers: animator Glen Keane wanted his Tarzan to move through the jungle like a real ape

'I had never understood before why Tarzan didn't just instantly want to go away with Jane when he meets her, but when I encountered these gorillas I began to understand. Does he go with someone who looks like himself, or stay in this other world in which he belongs?'

While working out the way Tarzan was to move, Glen also drew inspiration from human beings – his own family, in fact.

'I watched my son, who is into extreme sports. I thought I'd have Tarzan like a tree surfer, actually surfing the trees. He is totally confident in the jungle.

'He grabs trees with his toes like a monkey, but I took the design of Tarzan's feet from my wife. She has these long agile toes. I was sitting massaging her feet one night when I suddenly said, "Linda, you have Tarzan's feet."'

Tarzan's face called for particular attention to detail. 'Tarzan has to be very muscular, which can create the wrong image. When I first drew him he had a bigger nose and chin, and he looked a bit like an Arnold Schwarzenegger tough guy, a muscular superhero, which wasn't right at all. So I narrowed his chin, made his features finer.

'I had real problems with his hair. At first it was far too bouffant. I thought I would make his hair tangled, and that's how we ended up with those dreadlocks. It was the most complex part of drawing Tarzan.'

Glen was very aware of the need to project Tarzan's innocence. 'He is completely unaware of himself,' Keane says. 'Probably my favourite moment in the film is when Tarzan meets Jane. He is not afraid to show his curiosity. We bring him right up to Jane's face, have him look under her skirt. Then he gets hit in the face by Jane, but that's no big deal for him as it happens all the time with the gorillas. He just picks himself up and goes on.'

In spite of his jungle upbringing, the legend of Tarzan paints a picture of a very dignified man, and that was not always easy for this animator to put across. 'One of the biggest problems was that when you put Tarzan on all fours he was inclined to look like the family pet, like a dog. And that was not Tarzan. Gorillas look regal, I saw that very much in Africa. They stand there with their chests puffed up. I knew that if I could animate the spirit of the gorillas then I had Tarzan.'

Glen was also involved in the choice of Tony Goldwyn as the voice of Tarzan. 'Tarzan doesn't have a lot of dialogue, but it was vital whoever played him could put across that spirit in the voice that we had worked so hard to put into his design. Tony's a baritone with a voice that gives real depth, even when Tarzan's just grunting.'

In spite of being regarded as one of the great stars of the Disney studio, Glen says he never really wanted to be a Disney animator.

'Cartoons don't interest me much – art and human relationships do, but in Tarzan I found all that,' he says. 'Again, that scene where Tarzan meets Jane says it all. For the first time he is meeting someone who looks like him. When I worked on that scene I realised it was like that when my first child was born. My daughter, Claire, is 21 now, but she was just 30 seconds old when I realised that I could see myself in her. I was just amazed.

'When Tarzan meets Jane it's that kind of symbolic moment.' cg

Baby for Adoption

Whisky is a lively six year old who lives with his mother Happy Dragon off the coast of the Moray Firth in Scotland. Traditionally, he would have a long, carefree life ahead of him with few natural dangers. A life full of friendship, fun and freedom to follow his natural instincts - exactly what any parent would want for their child. Unfortunately, today, many dolphins like Whisky are threatened daily by pollution, over-fishing, capture and drowning in fishing nets.

Adopt a Dolphin

That is why WDCS, the Whale & Dolphin Conservation Society is asking you to adopt Whisky, or his friend Sundance, for just £3 a month. By doing so, you will be helping our fight to protect all whales and dolphins.

Return your form today and you will receive an adoption pack to introduce you to your chosen dolphin. You will also get regular mailings - our six-monthly full colour WDCS Magazine, plus quarterly newsletters - as well as our video, 'The World of Whales and Dolphins'. Junior adopters will receive four editions of our 8 page junior magazine throughout the year.

Send for your adoption pack today and start working with us to protect dolphins like Whisky in their natural environment. Spread the cost of your adoption by using the direct debit form below - it's easy for you and saves our administration costs.

Please tick the box by your chosen dolphin, then fill in your details below.

☐ WHISKY is a very lively youngster, first identified in 1994. He is usually spotted close to his mother, Happy Dragon. The pair are very adventurous and are often seen far from the other Moray Firth dolphins. He also spends a lot of time playing with another young dolphin named Sundance.

☐ BUBBLES is a friendly, mature female with distinctive mottled skin markings. She is a grandmother, and spends much time with her daughter Porridge and grandchild Oats.

☐ SUNDANCE is a young male. He has an unusual 'orange' spot on his dorsal fin, making him easy to identify when he is spotted near the boats amongst the other dolphins. If he's not with the other Moray Firth dolphins, he can usually be found with his great friend Whisky.

☐ SPLASH has a tall narrow fin and very distinctive mottled skin, which makes her easy to recognise. She is one of the few dolphins who stays in the Moray Firth all year round, and has been spotted over forty times in the last year!

I wish to become a Friend of the Dolphins for £3 a month

In the age of state-of-the-art, computer-generated wizardry, Gerry Anderson's Supermarionation shows remain as popular as ever. Interview: Nick Griffiths

THERE ARE VERY FEW septugenarian heroes. (The average male life expectancy in the United States, for instance, is 64.9 years.) Gerry Anderson, born 1929 in Hampstead, London, is an exception. The creator of Thunderbirds, Captain Scarlet and the Mysterons, Stingray, Joe 90, UFO, Space:1999, even The Protectors, has a fanbase that speckles the globe.

It comprises the odd fanatic. The genial Anderson recalls last year's 'Fanderson' convention: 'There was this French guy who told me he had 3000 items of Gerry Anderson merchandise. I didn't even know there were 3000. He had, for instance, 18 models of Lady Penelope's Rolls Royce and showed me the photographs. I said, "They're all the same" and he said, "No, this was the first one made, then when production began again, the car was a slightly darker pink ..."'

The man elicits devotion. He is of that televisual era when Cult was born. Thunderbirds, the most popular series, now re-launching on Cartoon Network, was all boys' toys, American accents and space race. Far from slipping into the realms of nostalgia, his shows are enjoying new life. Recently acquired by British company Carlton, there are digitally-remastered video and DVD releases as well as all the latest merchandising opportunities. Yet incredibly, in the age of CGI (computer-generated imagery) movies Toy Story and Shrek, the stars of many of these enduring creations were 'Supermarionation' puppets. Wooden things. With strings.

'In those early days, it felt a bit demeaning to be making puppet shows'

Thunderbirds' Lady Penelope walked like a woman attached to invisible balloons.

Of course, it was not always global success and adoration. Gerald Alexander Anderson originally wanted to be an architect, studied plastering at building school then discovered he was allergic to plaster. He entered the world of film via the Ministry of Information's Colonial Film Unit and in 1955 co-founded his first company. Six months later, on the verge of bankruptcy, he was asked to make a children's puppet show, which would become The Adventures of Twizzle.

Thunderbirds are go: Gerry Anderson and some of his creations

NOW SHOWING

Thunderbirds
Cartoon Network, weekends from Saturday 8th

'We were so desperate we said, "Yes." And that's how we came to make puppet shows. I tried to make them as near to live-action as possible, because it was my way of saying, "Look, I really can make live-action pictures."

'Twizzle, Torchy the Battery Boy, Supercar ... In those early days, it felt a bit demeaning to be making puppet shows. I had ambitions to become a sort of Steven Spielberg of the 1960s, so, yes, I found it very embarrassing.'

Only with 1965's Thunderbirds did Anderson become proud. Prior to its airing, he had sat with original boss, the legendary Lord Lew Grade, watching the first episode. 'He came right up to me, wagged his finger in my face and said, "Gerry, this is not a television series. This is a feature film." That was the moment I knew we had something very special.'

But everyone must move on and Anderson is now working in CGI. There is a new, hush-hush show with Japanese financiers that will be two years in production. Negotiations to remake Captain Scarlet in CGI are at an advanced stage. And the live-action Eternity, about the discovery of a drug that prevents ageing, is due for filming, with a Japanese company already making a CGI version.

There will, however, be no more Supermarionation characters. In July, it was a case of 'Thunderbirds are going, going, gone' as two of the series' original puppets were put up for auction. The fact that Alan Tracy and Parker were sold for a staggering total of £57,000 is proof of the esteem in which the show is still held.

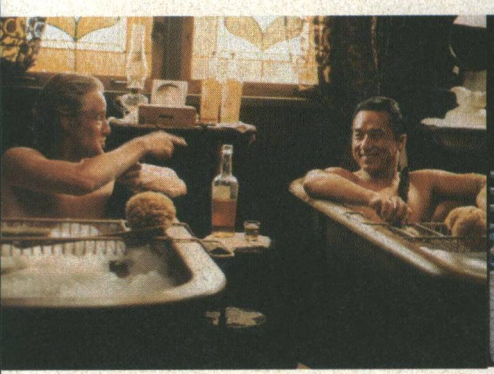
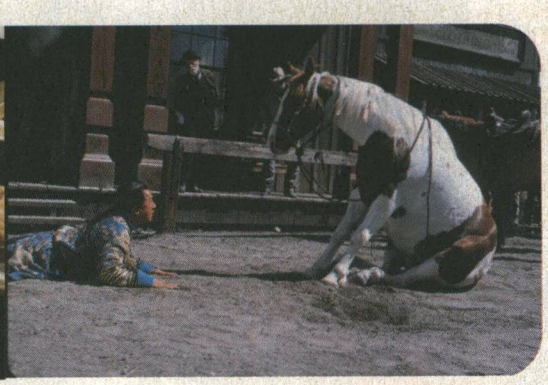
SHANGHAI NOON 12





JACKIE CHAN, OWEN WILSON, LUCY LIU

106 MINS PREMIERE

When a Chinese princess (Ally McBeal's Ling) is abducted in the Wild West, Chon Wang (John Wayne, geddit?) is despatched from the Forbidden City to rescue her. Jackie Chan is naturally ideally suited to this marvellous fish-out-of-water action comedy with his martial arts expertise and winning humour. The more surprising treat is his chemistry with charming sidekick Wilson, as a Sundance Kid wannabe, creating hugely fun hijinks and rollicking, rootin' tootin' adventure.

AMERICAN MOVIE 15
101 MINS PREMIERE

Truth is stranger and more fascinating than fiction as documentary maker Chris Smith follows the desperate efforts of oddball aspiring Wisconsin film-maker Mark Borchardt, his friends and family to complete his home-made horror movie Coven. Hysterically funny and quite touching, this proves 'ordinary' people can be utterly extraordinary.

BIG MOMMA'S HOUSE 12
MARTIN LAWRENCE, NIA LONG
95 MINS
FBI agent Martin Lawrence takes a leaf out of Eddie Murphy's book, getting his knickers in a twist, finding romance and hurling himself energetically into cross-dressing antics. Assigned to protect a federal witness and her son, he goes undercover impersonating a fat, cantankerous, Southern granny known simply as Big Momma.

BLACK AND WHITE 18
ROBERT DOWNEY JR, BROOKE SHIELDS, CLAUDIA SCHIFFER
96 MINS PREMIERE
Husband and wife documentary makers Downey and Shields follow a group of privileged white Manhattan teens who want to be black, affecting a hip-hop lifestyle and flirting with disaster when they join the hangers-on of a gangsta rapper. Provocative drama laced with edgy humour features an eye-catching ensemble, including boxer Mike Tyson.

A CLOCKWORK ORANGE 18
MALCOLM McDOWELL, PATRICK MAGEE, ADRIENNE CORRI, WARREN CLARKE
132 MINS
Stanley Kubrick's most controversial film, recently returned to UK cinemas after being withdrawn by the director himself after its initial release, is an electrifying adaptation of the Anthony Burgess novel. Delinquent youth Alex gets his kicks from Beethoven and leading his 'droogs' on rampages of 'ultra-violence'. But the brutality that ensues in Alex's punishment and rehabilitation is just as scary in this scathing satire of society's corruption and sadism. Kubrick's arresting vision is dated by detail, but the picture of aimless louts alleviating their boredom in mindless viciousness is chillingly topical. Highly stylised, this still packs more punch than its many imitators.

BRENDAN FRASER, SARAH JESSICA PARKER, ALFRED MOLINA, ERIC IDLE
74 MINS PREMIERE
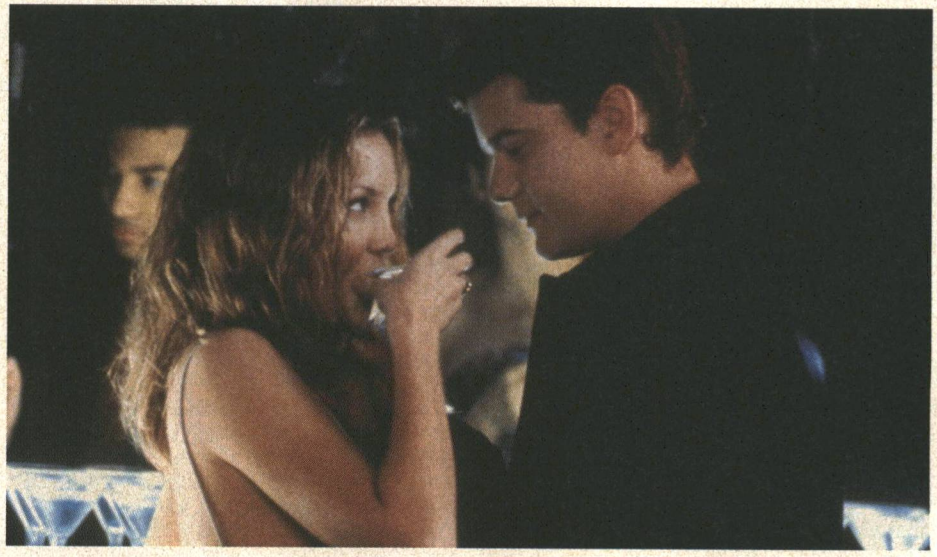
Hunky but lovable Fraser brings to life another 1960s cartoon hoot from George of the Jungle creator Jay Ward. Dudley is a square-jawed Canadian mountie foiling the nefarious schemes of evil Snidely Whiplash (Alfred Molina) while befriending Kumquat Indians, reuniting with childhood sweetheart Nell (Parker) and seeking his lost horse, named Horse.



ESSEX BOYS 18
SEAN BEAN, CHARLIE CREED-MILES, ALEX KINGSTON, TOM WILKINSON
98 MINS
Sean Bean is venomous as an East End hoodlum in a British gangster thriller of sexual jealousy and a drug deal gone awry, inspired by the real-life discovery of three bodies in Epping Forest. Alex Kingston, in a break from ER surgery, provides the glamour.

FORTRESS 2: RE-ENTRY 15
CHRISTOPHER LAMBERT
89 MINS
Seven years on from the original, Christopher Lambert is back in this action sci-fi sequel. John Brennick (Lambert), still up to no good, is again locked away in a maximum security jail, but this time it is an orbital prison 42,000 km above Earth. Cue the ingenious devising of gadgets and escape plans to save his wife and son back on terra firma.

GONE IN 60 SECONDS 15
NICOLAS CAGE, ANGELINA JOLIE, GIOVANNI RIBISI, VINNIE JONES
114 MINS
To save his feckless brother from a criminal client's death sentence, retired car thief Nicolas Cage is forced to recruit a gang with automotive expertise (many must wish they had a mechanic who looked like pouting Angelina Jolie) and hit the streets to steal 50 luxury cars in just one night. Cool motors, a key-swallowing canine, hectic energy and an extremely entertaining ensemble enliven the heist action in this adrenalin-charged outing.

GOSSIP 15
JAMES MARSDEN, LENA HEADEY
87 MINS PREMIERE
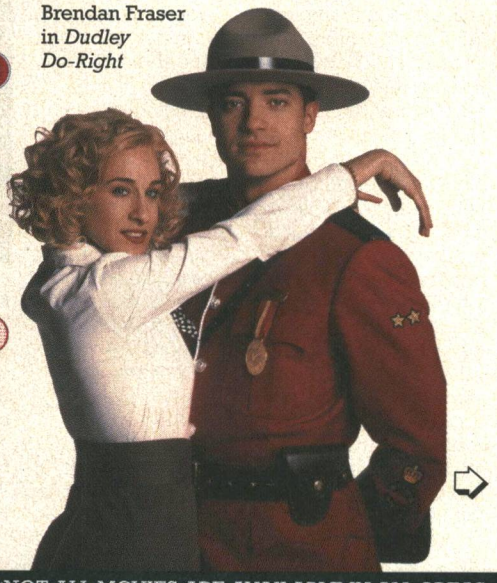
Marsden and college pals start a malicious rumour about a classmate as a class project to chart how a story spreads. The experiment soon goes pear-shaped with betrayals and tragedy in a seductive thriller full of young, pretty people including Dawson's Creek pin-up Joshua Jackson (pictured below).

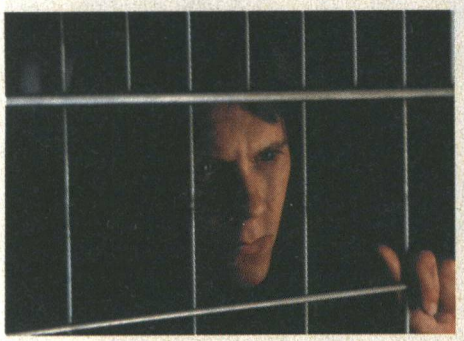


Sarah Jessica Parker and Brendan Fraser in Dudley Do-Right

*NOT ALL MOVIES ARE AVAILABLE IN ALL AREAS

My Dog Skip: Canine characterisation by Moose (better known as Eddie from Frasier).

HIGH FIDELITY 15
JOHN CUSACK, JACK BLACK
110 MINS
Nick Hornby's London novel transfers with surprising ease to Chicago, where record store owner Rob Gordon ponders his history of failed romances, disputes musical tastes and obsessively compiles Top Five lists of everything. It's a funny, idiosyncratic comedy of man versus women, with cameos from Catherine Zeta-Jones and Tim Robbins, a sarcastic scene-stealer in Jack Black, and great tunes too.



HOLLOW MAN 18
KEVIN BACON, ELISABETH SHUE
108 MINS PREMIERE
The mad scientist is a favourite in sci-fi horror, and they don't come much madder than the genius who's made himself irreversibly invisible. Director Paul Verhoeven takes the classic fantasy concept and spins a mean, modern variation on it. Brilliant, arrogant scientist Sebastian Caine (Bacon) makes himself the human guinea pig in his invisibility research. Since the animals he and his team have been experimenting on become unhinged after vanishing, this is transparently a bad idea. Sure enough, when the visibility serum doesn't restore his looks, Caine rapidly degenerates into a sadistic, power-crazed maniac who uses his invisibility for nasty pranks, sexual assault and murder, forcing colleague Shue and the boys at the lab to hunt a see-through serial killer. The cat-and-mouse chase features sensational effects that make creatures disappear, from skin to organs to skeleton, and the bandage-free Bacon take fleeting shape striding through smoke, emerging from water and covered in blood. Not for the squeamish!
Turn to page 47 for our feature on Kevin Bacon

ME, MYSELF & IRENE 15
JIM CARREY, RENÉE ZELLWEGER
112 MINS PREMIERE
The awesome rubber-faced, knockabout physical comedy talents of Jim Carrey are exploited to the max by Peter and Bobby Farrelly (the writer-director brothers who brought you Dumb and Dumber and There's Something About Mary), who get two Carreys for the price of one in another of their famously shameless gross-out japes, a wacky tale of duelling personalities. Sweet smalltown cop Charlie is put upon cruelly by one and all, until one day he totally snaps and his suppressed rage manifests itself as his slick, conniving, evil alter ego, Hank.
Turn to page 44 for our feature on Jim Carrey

MY DOG SKIP U
LUKE WILSON, FRANKIE MUNIZ, DIANE LANE, KEVIN BACON
92 MINS PREMIERE
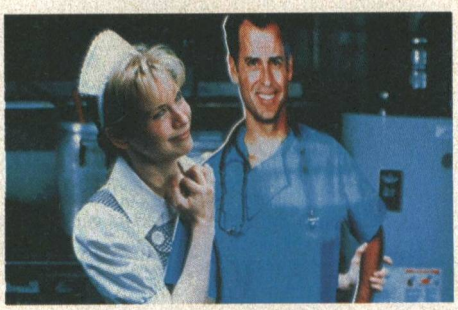
Engaging Malcolm in the Middle star Muniz and canine star Moose (who plays incorrigible Eddie on Frasier) team up in the heart-warming, autobiographical coming-of-age story of a sad, lonely boy whose friendship with an extrovert Jack Russell terrier changes his life. Lane and Bacon provide stalwart support as the parents.



NURSE BETTY 18
RENÉE ZELLWEGER, MORGAN FREEMAN, GREG KINNEAR, CHRIS ROCK
106 MINS PREMIERE
Renée Zellweger is absolutely captivating in this deliciously offbeat, darkly comic gem as a sweet waitress and telly addict who longs to be a nurse but is hindered by her oafish, cheating husband. Witnessing his murder provokes a psychological trauma and she heads for Hollywood, believing she is the fiancée of the fictional doctor (Kinnear) in her favourite hospital soap. Pursued by the odd couple killers (Freeman and Chris Rock), she innocently creates confusion and makes a surprise hit with her heart-throb in an original, deft plot.

THE PATRIOT 15
MEL GIBSON, HEATH LEDGER, JOELY RICHARDSON, JASON ISAACS
158 MINS
Roland Emmerich and Dean Devlin, the team behind Independence Day, turn to history for a stirring epic of the American War of Independence. Mel Gibson is on top brave-hearted form as the farmer who turns avenging warrior when George III's redcoats start behaving like Nazis in 18th-century South Carolina. Not designed to endear itself to UK audiences (Jason Isaacs' dastardly, massacre-ordering British officer is only modestly balanced by Tom Wilkinson's gentlemanly General Cornwallis), this is nonetheless terrific, cinematic stuff that delivers big emotional moments of tragedy, valour and love.

RETURN TO ME PG
DAVID DUCHOVNY, MINNIE DRIVER, CARROLL O'CONNOR
112 MINS
When architect David Duchovny's wife is killed in a car crash he donates her heart for transplant. A year later he falls for bubbly Minnie Driver, unaware that she was the organ recipient. What could have been sentimental tosh is actually a good old-fashioned treat, with Duchovny and Driver delightful together. Directed with style by actress Bonnie Hunt, whose CV includes Jumanji and The Green Mile.

ROAD TRIP - UNCUT 15
BRECKIN MEYER, SEANN W SCOTT, AMY SMART, FRED WARD
91 MINS PREMIERE
Fans of gross-out youth comedy along the lines of Animal House and American Pie will be reduced to laughing until beer spurts out of their noses by this defiantly puerile adventure. After accidentally sending his estranged high school sweetheart a video of him making out with another girl (don't ask!), college student Josh (Meyer) sets off across America hoping to get to her before the post does. Along for the ride in a stolen school bus are a trio of buddies, who naturally instigate all manner of misbehaviour, disaster and politically incorrect hilarity.

Wes Craven's witty, blockbusting Scream trilogy of horror – which itself played with parody – lays the foundation for this cheerfully absurd and taste-free spoof of the teen slasher flick genre, written and directed by a gang of US TV comedy veterans led by the three brothers Shawn, Marlon and director Keenen Ivory Wayans (of I'm Gonna Git You Sucka). Once again a masked madman given to heavy-breathing phone calls carves his way through a town's partying teenagers while a plucky-if-terrified heroine (the unknown, brilliantly funny Anna Faris as Cindy) puzzles out his/her/their/its identity. The opening sequence of pneumatic Carmen Electra (playing a girl named Drew) is so ridiculously spot-on a leg-pull of the Drew Barrymore sequence in Scream you expect things can only go downhill from there. But there is an avalanche of references, wicked smut and pillaging of an assortment of recent hits and genres, with The Blair Witch Project, The Sixth Sense and The Matrix send-ups providing highlights in the lowbrow lunacy. The film's original title – Scream If You Know What I Did Last Halloween – sums up the antics. And did you know the original title of Scream was, yes, Scary Movie?

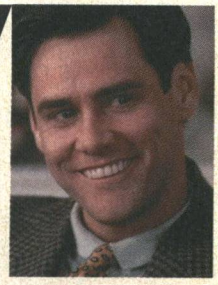
Me, Myself & Irene

Front Row, see listings for details

The outrageous antics of Me, Myself & Irene may not have seemed like a challenge for rubber-faced funny man Jim Carrey. But, he tells Lawrie Masterson, his split-personality role was doubly difficult to play

CARREY on laughing



'I'M MORE CHARLIE THAN Hank, obviously,' superstar Jim Carrey muses, contemplating the split personalities he plays in Me, Myself & Irene, an outrageous comedy from the twisted imaginations of Dumb and Dumber directors Bobby and Peter Farrelly.

Which is probably a good thing. Not that you'd want Charlie Baileygates around most of the time either, mind you. A Rhode Island state trooper, Charlie is obliging to the point of being sickening, but at least he's a preferable alternative.

Hank appears when Charlie forgets to take his medication. He is aggressive, foul-mouthed and misogynous, and the real trouble starts when he and Charlie fall for the same woman.

That would be Irene Waters (Renée Zellweger), who becomes an understandably confused pawn in a war between the two, played by Carrey with that stroke of out-there genius which highlights so many of his performances. He switches seamlessly between the characters, sometimes in mid-sentence, with an ease which leaves you wondering whether even he is aware of what he is doing.

'The reason I took the film was because I thought it was such a great concept, the two entities falling in love with the same person,' he says. 'The challenge was to go back and forth and really define them. Hank basically came from whatever was left in the void, whatever was missing from Charlie. I wanted to separate them because it made it easier for me to make a kind of psychological study of both. When I was switching back and forth quickly it had to be really well defined in my head or it would get kind of muddled up.

'Hank was the one with all the anger, and I always find the whispering, quietly bizarre guy scarier than the guy who is just outwardly angry, so I made him the quiet, dangerous type. It was really fun to do, a blast. Fortunately I have the proper level of desperation to kind of lose myself no matter what I have going on.'

The lanky, rubber-faced Carrey, 39, admits he has had to learn to overcome his own anger after years of 'smiling like [actress] Carol Channing until my face would crack off, then secretly fighting later on in the shower.

'I have been put through several lessons in patience in the past couple of years,' he says. 'One was How the Grinch Stole Christmas, where the make-up was extremely difficult. I looked at it like, "Well, this is God teaching me patience." All these things are lessons in how to deal with your feelings. I have failed miserably in my career at certain times when I tried to make things happen and I didn't just sit back and relax and go, "I know there are gifts out there for me and they'll come when they're supposed to."'

He has never, he claims, had anger to vent over his brilliant performances in the more dramatic movies The Truman Show (1998) and Man on the Moon (1999) being snubbed by his peers at Academy Awards time.

'I don't expect people, after six wild comedies in a row, to give me the world in the space of two dramatic films,' he says. 'The only reason I've ever gotten mad with the universe was because I was maybe in pain about being lonely or something else. That's the only time I've ever hollered at God.

'Never about a part, or loss of a part, and I've lost many parts to many people. Before they went to Will Smith for Men in Black they talked to me, but at the time I just didn't want to do it.

'When it came out I enjoyed it immensely and I think it was meant to be Will's part. I didn't get upset about it. What does drive me over the edge? Hmmm. Not too much.'

Despite the typically outrageous sight gags he helps film-making siblings Bobby and Peter Farrelly bring to the screen, Carrey says he allowed his teenage daughter, Jane, from his first marriage to Melissa Womer, to see Me, Myself & Irene.

'I made her close her eyes in certain parts,' he says with his trademark grin. 'But it's cool because it comes from a good-hearted place. It really is just comedy, just fun.' cg

FUNNY BUSINESS

The humour of Me, Myself & Irene could be described as puerile – but that's the point, says star Renée Zellweger

After moving from Me, Myself & Irene straight into Bridget Jones's Diary, Renée Zellweger could be forgiven for hoping for a less embarrassing role next time.

But embarrassment, she says, was the key to playing Irene opposite Jim Carrey's split-personality character.

'The Farrelly brothers are constantly pushing the boundaries and I think what we appreciate about their humour is that it surprises us and they take it into places where no one else has gone,' says the petite, Texas-born actress.

'When I met them initially they asked me if I was game. They said, "It's bad on the page and it gets worse. Will you go for it?" And I thought, "Well, that's the point – to see how far we could take it." So it was exciting more than anything.

'What was the most embarrassing moment? It's always embarrassing when you have to put yourself in situations that imply sexual activity. The scatological things are no problem but the other situations do make you feel vulnerable.'

Months of working together obviously had an effect on Carrey and 32-year-old Zellweger. After they wrapped shooting, they became involved in a real-life romance, which extended through her making Bridget Jones's Diary. But by the time that movie was released, they were no longer an item.

'I can't share with you about my past relationship,' Zellweger says now. 'But I can tell you that, as with every life experience, you hopefully emerge a little wiser for having had it, and I have. And I'm happy – so that's good enough.'

Out of sight

A convincing theory places Kevin Bacon at the centre of the film universe, connectable to any other actor by six steps or fewer. Surely such a visible performer would relish the chance to disappear into a role? Interview: Lawrie Masterson

WHAT WOULD YOU DO if you were invisible? It is a question which has often been posed to actor Kevin Bacon since he starred in director Paul (Basic Instinct) Verhoeven's special-effects blockbuster Hollow Man – but he still struggles to answer.

'I just don't know,' he says. 'I'm not sure how pleasant it would be for very long. When I was a boy it was all about going to the girls' locker rooms. Now I don't think I would – I've seen naked girls so I don't think I'd do that!'

For Bacon's character in the film, Sebastian Caine, invisibility brings about a frightening mental, as well as physical, metamorphosis. Caine is a gifted scientist who heads a top secret US Government research project aimed at perfecting an invisibility serum. When it is successful in tests on animals, he recklessly disobeys Pentagon orders to experiment on himself.

His transformation results in remarkable power, which suffocates his sense of morality and fuels latent megalomaniac tendencies. 'It is amazing,' Caine remarks ominously at one point in the film, 'what you can do when you don't have to look in the mirror'.

Bacon, 43, says he could relate to Caine's descent into evil as shooting of the movie wore on, as he was required to wear specially designed contact lenses, a mask and body paint which made him invisible to the camera.

'The thing that strikes me about invisibility is that it would be a very lonely place, that you would feel very isolated,' he says.

'I would put on the lenses, the mask or be painted and I kind of looked like a freak, so it was very difficult for the other actors and the crew to relate to me as a normal person. As a result, I sort of drew into myself, so there were things I experienced that were similar to what the character was going through.'

Bacon is not just a highly regarded actor, a musician with his own band (the Bacon Brothers), and a budding director. He also is something of a pop culture phenomenon because of the movie trivia parlour game Six Degrees of Kevin Bacon. Legend has it that it was devised by three college students, Craig Fass, Brian Turtle and Mike Ginelli.

It is based on the John Guare play Six Degrees of Separation, which suggests we are all connected by six or fewer stages of circumstance or acquaintance. The three students took it further and hypothesised that Bacon might just be the centre of the universe for actors.

For instance, to connect him to actress Elisabeth Shue is easy – they starred together in Hollow Man – but try linking him to, say, Jayne Mansfield, the 1950s blonde bombshell. It works like this: Mansfield was in A Guide for the Married Man with Walter Matthau, who was in JFK with Kevin Bacon. Or how about Lee Van Cleef? The spaghetti Western icon was in The Young Lions with Maximilian Schell, who was in Telling Lies in America with ... well, you know who.

'It was a little bit disconcerting to me at first,' Bacon admits. 'I didn't really understand why they chose me and I really thought they were making fun of me. But it's just out there in peoples' consciousness and nobody's making any money from it. Nobody's getting rich.' cg

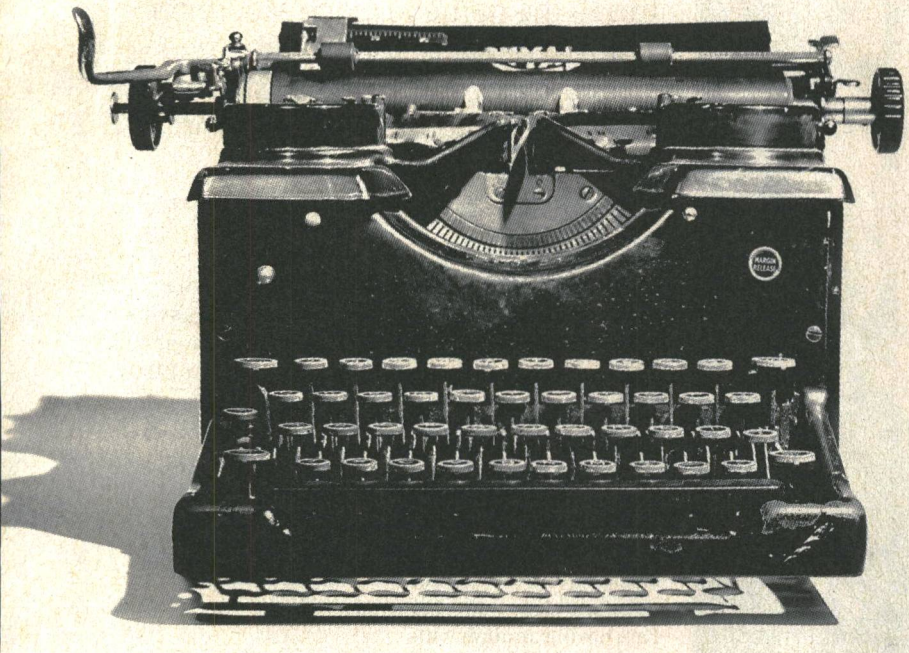
Kim Newman

Hollywood has rarely portrayed the press in a good light – for every roving reporter hero there are a dozen more crooked hacks



The write stuff

OF ALL THE MOVIES about the newspaper business, 1957's Sweet Smell of Success is probably the favourite among those who work in it. There isn't a columnist in the world who doesn't secretly wish they could be like Burt Lancaster's fearsome JJ Hunsecker, tapping out acid on a typewriter for 60 million readers; wearing a sharp hat and striding along the neon nightmare of Broadway; holding court in nightclubs attended by cringing toadies, beautiful and eager blondes and the rich and powerful. Heck, we'd all love to have the phone number of a friendly cop who'd frame our enemies on drug possession beefs and dole out punishment beatings to anyone who dares write a complaining letter to the editor.

The irony is that Sweet Smell, directed by Ealing comedy veteran Alexander Mackendrick (Whisky Galore, The Man in the White Suit, The Ladykillers), is also the biggest indictment of corruption and crookedness of the press imaginable. Most Hollywood newshounds (from the two-fisted scribblers of director Samuel Fuller's Park Row, through the fast-talking hustlers of The Front Page, to the conspiracy-busting Woodward and Bernstein of All the President's Men) may dress and talk like low lifes, and have a cynical streak a mile wide, but they're determined to break the big story, and always ferret out what the cops or the politicians try to cover up. The epitome of this sort of hero, of course, is Clark Kent, mild-mannered alias of Superman, whose fedora hat (with a press card tucked in the brim) and hornrims went out in the 1940s but were still being worn by Christopher Reeve in the 1970s and 1980s.

NOW SHOWING

Sweet Smell of Success, Carlton Cinema, Saturday 1st, 11.00pm

However, Sweet Smell wasn't the first movie exposé of the press. With Citizen Kane, Orson Welles discovered it wasn't always a good career move to make a film indicting the private foibles of an enormously powerful press baron as he found himself dogged by vicious pieces from the presses of William Randolph Hearst, the tycoon who saw himself in the character Charles Foster Kane. The underrated 1931 quickie Five Star Final is a potent attack on the scandal sheets that still seems relevant, as editor Edward G Robinson drives innocents to suicide by raking up the dirt; there is a wonderful performance from Boris Karloff as a defrocked clergyman mixed up in a blackmail racket. These points about the press's unethical traits crop up again in Absence of Malice, with Paul Newman crucified because of family ties, but are now played for comedy in jokes about those Sunday Sport-type papers that sell by the million but which nobody admits to reading.

Before Lancaster's Hunsecker, there were other movie monster columnists. Waldo Lydecker (Clifton Webb), in Otto Preminger's Laura, is based (like Hunsecker) on the real-life Walter Winchell, depicted as an effete mastermind who types out his column while sitting in the bath and turns out to be guilty of a ghastly shotgun slaying (he doesn't even kill the right girl).

The character of Sheridan Whiteside (Monty Woolley), in the crazy comedy The Man Who Came to Dinner, owes more to Winchell's upmarket rival Alexander Woolcott, but spends as much time as Lydecker and Hunsecker spitting out nasty epigrams to quivering little people – though he is rendered comically absurd rather than outright horrendous. And Chuck Tatum (Kirk Douglas), in Billy Wilder's Ace in the Hole, lets a man die horribly to string out a story that'll put him back on the front page.

These days, stories like these would be made about TV (Broadcast News, The Insider); the flop Mad City is essentially Ace in the Hole for the OJ generation. Back in 1957, as the media was changing, Hunsecker had a TV show as well as a byline, but it was the column where he could do real damage.

This has been your man on the Cable Guide beat, Kim Newman, taking a break from ruining lives to put on a hat and faithfully type out this month's wordage. It's probably best not to complain. cg

Affairs of the heart

To see the name Julianne Moore on a film's credits is to be guaranteed of its quality. She seems to shine in challenging and controversial dramas, such as The End of the Affair.
Interview: Garth Pearce

JULIANNE MOORE HAS NEVER had any fear about naked sex scenes. She has performed them, from the waist down, in Robert Altman's Short Cuts, and from the waist up, as porn queen Amber Waves in the acclaimed Boogie Nights. So she could not understand the fuss over her love scene with Ralph Fiennes in The End of the Affair.

Moore, 39, plays the married Sarah Miles who has an affair with writer Maurice Bendrix in this wartime story, adapted from Graham Greene's classy novel. Director Neil Jordan did something that nobody in the 1955 film version of the book was prepared to do – show just how high their passions ran in the privacy of a bedroom.

It resulted in an 18 certificate from the British Board of Film Classification, prompting Moore to ask: 'Is my naked body going to corrupt those who watch the film? I am not being exploited. I make up my own mind on whether or not I'm going to take off my clothes.

'I've been asked in the past, many times, things along the lines of a director suddenly announcing: "I think she should take her top off here." And I always say, "No." There has to be a point to the scene, otherwise it is just a matter of saying, "Hey, look at her naked butt." If it takes away from what I am supposed to be doing or saying, then what is the point?'

We had met over a pot of tea served in Brighton's Grand Hotel, just a few streets away from where the film crew had convincingly made a four-storey house look like a 1940s hotel. She was due to enter the building the next morning to film one of the furtive meetings between the two lovers. Even at that stage, she knew that she was on to a winner, with Stephen Rea playing her stuffy husband, Henry, and Ian Hart as the ferreting detective hired to follow her.

'It is a moving story,' she says. 'Ralph's character is so absolutely in love with my own that he becomes jealous – not of my husband, but of someone else he wrongly thinks I am having an affair with.

'But there is a twist of sadness, which it is best not to let the audience know in advance. The costumes, sets and writing make it easy to imagine stepping back in time and playing these characters.'

She also saw a new side to the usually shy and taciturn Ralph Fiennes: 'I am surprised at what a great sense of humour he has,' she says. 'He tells a lot of stories against himself and is always having a laugh before a scene. He can then become his character in an instant.'

The film became another stepping stone for the popular Moore, who recently completed a film for her writer-director partner, Bart Freundlich (the couple have a three-year-old son, Caleb).

'I know that at some point in the future, our son will look at my old films to find out the kind of things that Mum got up to,' she says. 'So I don't want to be in anything that is tacky. It is either going to work for the right reasons, or it is not. It is the same with Bart. He always says that he is proud of me – and that's the way I want it to stay.'

Moore met her partner after the collapse of her marriage to actor John Gould Rubin. 'I left my husband in New York to put thousands of miles between us,' she recalls. 'I arrived in Los Angeles in 1994 and did not return until April 1998. It was a terrible time at first, until I met Bart. It was wonderful to be in love again. The End of the Affair proves it is the strongest of emotions.'

He also seemed to act like Moore's lucky charm. She enjoyed her first role in a big budget movie, as Dr Sarah Harding in the monster blockbuster Jurassic Park: The Lost World, shortly after they met. She was also chosen by director Ridley Scott to replace Jodie Foster as FBI agent Clarice Starling opposite Anthony Hopkins in The Silence of the Lambs sequel Hannibal.

On the strength of all these fine performances, it seems there is a great deal of Moore to come. cg

BEING JOHN MALKOVICH

John Cusack, Cameron Diaz, Catherine Keener, Ned Bellamy John Malkovich

Probably the most inventive comedy to come out of America in the last few years, this curiosity is as puzzling as it is entertaining. Cusack is the radical puppeteer nagged by his dowdy (honest!) and eccentric wife Diaz to get a proper job. He does so, becoming a filing clerk in a strange, low-ceilinged office where one day he accidentally finds a small door that leads directly into the brain of actor Malkovich. Soon everyone wants to go there, including Cusack's heartless co-worker, Keener, and a very strange love triangle develops. Nothing is as it seems in this topsy-turvy world, and you have to admire Malkovich for allowing himself to be parodied so astutely.

Clooney added considerably to his status as a movie star in this energetic and biting satire about war and greed. Clooney, Wahlberg, Ice Cube and Being John Malkovich director Spike Jonze play the cynical Gulf War soldiers who stumble on a horde of hidden Iraqi gold. Their plan is to run with the stash, but the trio find themselves helping some Iraqi refugees instead.

Fiennes and Moore are passionate wartime lovers at the heart of this chilly drama. Fiennes plays a writer whose affair with the married Moore comes to a sudden end after an air raid. After the war, he encounters her husband (Stephen Rea) who thinks she's still being unfaithful. Catholic guilt hangs heavily over the entire movie.

Sparks fly in the deep South, as frustrated wife Taylor tries to get some response from drunken, repressed Newman, while the dying Big Daddy Burl Ives lays down the law and tries to keep the family wolves from his door. Taylor and Newman are at their most gorgeous, and it's a gloriously overblown melodrama.

PICK OF THE DAY

Rock
E4 8.00pm
For most of the year, Rock, near Padstow in north Cornwall, is just like any other picture-postcard West Country village, but in summer the place is transformed. Dubbed Chelsea-on-Sea because of the number of wealthy families who have second homes there, the town is inundated with rich public school teenagers who flood into the town in search of sun, surf and the town's legendary all-night beach parties. This new documentary series follows their frenetic social activities over two months.

PICK OF THE DAY

Human Remains
Play 9.00pm, 11.40pm, 2.20am
Big Train's Julia Davis and Marion and Geoff's Rob Brydon teamed up to write this series of six blackly comic 'mockumentaries'. Each story homes in on a different couple who gradually reveal the unhinged nature of their relationship, just like in all those real-life TV documentaries. Among the couples from hell gaily exposing their foibles to the TV cameras, are the happily married middle-aged couple who organise S&M parties and two religious zealots who love their four dogs but clearly don't love their neighbours.

This highly original comedy drama centres around down-at-heel puppeteer Craig Schwartz (Cusack) whose life is transformed when he discovers a portal into actor John Malkovich's head. John Malkovich sends himself up mercilessly as the hapless and vain actor attempting to fight the puppeteer as he gains control of his life.

PICK OF THE DAY

Whatever Happened to Harold Smith?
Tom Courtenay, Stephen Fry, Michael Legge, Lulu
In the tradition of eccentric British comedies, this is a tale of a shy young man and his odd family, set in the 1970s. Vince Smith (Legge) lusts after a girl called Joanne but doesn't dare ask her out. But then it's hardly surprising considering his family. His dad (Courtenay) is a couch potato with recently discovered telekinetic powers and his mother (Lulu) is a nymphomaniac whom he's likely to catch climbing in through the window after one of her nights out.

PICK OF THE DAY

Ape-Man
UK Horizons 3.00pm
A telling episode of this documentary series, looking at the evolution of man, ties in nicely with the fever surrounding last month's release of Tim Burton's remake of Planet of the Apes . Cutting-edge work in genetics and the increasing evidence unearthed from archaeological sites around South Africa are closely followed to add credence to the theory that Homo sapiens first walked on African soil before gradually colonising other continents. Proof of this theory would have far-reaching consequences for the interpretation of history.

As arch-rivals England and Germany prepare to face off in a crunch qualifier, Jeremy Butler gets the lowdown from a key member of each team – England captain David Beckham and German midfield dynamo Dietmar Hamann

Make or break

BECKHAM CALL

David Beckham became public enemy number one when he was sent off in the last World Cup. But he's now one of the key members of the England squad, and has settled into his role of captain with great confidence

DAVID BECKHAM KNOWS HIS dream of captaining England to World Cup glory depends on halting the German machine in its tracks.

England travel to the imposing Olympic Stadium in Munich on Saturday 1st aware that only victory will guarantee a chance of securing a place in next summer's finals in Korea and Japan.

But Beckham, whose World Cup 98 appearance was wrecked by a red card in the second-round defeat by Argentina, has made a promise to ease the pain by knocking the Germans off the top of Group Nine.

He says: 'To be involved in the World Cup last time was a dream come true. It is everyone's ambition and I enjoyed the experience – whatever happened afterwards.

'But being captain this time would make it even more special to me – and to lead us to the World Cup would be unbelievable.

'Obviously this game has enormous consequences for that. First of all, it is England versus Germany again and everything that goes with that after the many meetings through the years.

'But more importantly, this is all about getting three more points towards qualification for the World Cup finals.

'Personally, I'm as happy and content as I've ever been because my England career has been rolling along and I'm involved in every game.

'I've loved it, but winning a major competition is the next target. You set yourself goals at domestic and international levels and the next goal has to be winning something for England.'

Avenging last October's 1-0 defeat at Wembley would put Sven-Göran Eriksson's men within touching distance of Germany – three points behind them with a game in hand. Which means it would still be possible for England to oust Rudi Völler's men – that is if they

THE QUEST TO QUALIFY

As England continue to fight for a place in the next World Cup, Simon Johnson looks back at some of the national side's key qualifiers

17 October, 1973
England 1 Poland 1 – Wembley
Polish goalkeeper Jan Tomaszewski was infamously labelled a 'clown' on television by Brian Clough, even though he'd produced the performance of his life. His heroics and England's errors took Poland to the 1974 finals in Germany at Sir Alf Ramsey's expense, effectively signalling the end of his historic managerial reign.

16 November, 1977
England 2 Italy 0 – Wembley
Italy still had a match with Luxembourg to come, so England had to win and win well. Goals from Trevor Brooking and Kevin Keegan sealed the victory, but Italy beat Luxembourg the following month to qualify on goal difference.

11 October, 1989
Poland 0 England 0 – Chorzów
Poland came within a whisker of extinguishing the flames of England's World Cup dream once again. England had to avoid defeat and it was only Peter Shilton's goalkeeping and the width of the cross bar that ensured they did so.

13 October, 1993
Holland 2 England 0 – Rotterdam
This defeat effectively cost England their place in another World Cup and troubled manager Graham Taylor his job. England's misery was compounded by the fact that defender Ronald Koeman, who scored Holland's opening goal, arguably should have been sent off earlier for a foul on midfielder David Platt.

11 October, 1997
Italy 0 England 0 – Rome
Regarded by many as Glenn Hoddle's finest achievement while in charge of the national team. This match saw England completely outplay Italy on their own soil and earn the point they needed to qualify automatically for the 1998 finals. Italy, meanwhile, had to qualify via the play-offs.

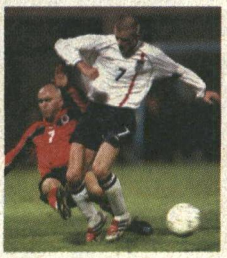
were to triumph in their home matches against Albania and Greece, and Germany were not to beat the unpredictable Finns, also on home soil.

But whether England can keep notching up the wins depends massively on the form of Beckham, something he freely admits has been hampered in the past 12 months by opponents' tactics.

In recent England games he's been given the freedom to drift in from his flank position to help influence games, if opposing defences attempt to mark him too closely.

'Teams have been putting two men on me,' he says resignedly. 'Players have been marking me so tightly though that I have to move to different positions to get on the ball.

'It happened last year in the European games with Manchester United as well, and that led to me dropping deeper into our own half.



'I was playing so far back so that I could get on the ball more. I desperately wanted to be involved and that means you need the ball.'

And if the Germans let him see too much of the ball, they could find themselves in trouble.

HAMANN WITH A MISSION

Dietmar Hamann broke the nation's hearts last year when he scored Germany's winning goal against England at Wembley. His message for the run-in to the return encounter is, 'You ain't seen nothing yet'.

GERMAN HEARTBREAKER DIETMAR HAMANN insists this month's World Cup showdown with England is a winner-takes-all fight to the death.

He became the most unpopular man on these shores last October when he silenced a packed Wembley with the all-important winner in the first group meeting of the two old foes. But Hamann, whose fierce free kick from distance squirmed under David Seaman's body to give Germany the edge at the top of World Cup qualifying Group Nine, insists that precious strike will count for nothing if England gain revenge in Munich.

'This game against England was always going to be the decisive one and we are expecting nothing less than a very hard and tough game,' Hamann reveals.

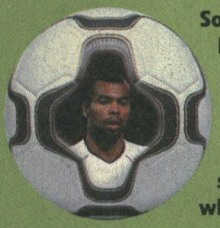
'England are breathing down our necks, but we've won five matches in the group and we'll be looking to win all our remaining games as well. However, this will be the important game and I'm sure England will be up for it.'

England travel to the do-or-die clash having clocked up five deserved victories under new manager Sven-Göran Eriksson – ironically appointed in the wake of Kevin Keegan's resignation following the German victory at Wembley.

In contrast, the Germans' recent international form is somewhat less convincing, with late victories over Greece and Albania and a hard-fought draw in Finland.

But Hamann believes his countrymen always rise to the big occasion: 'I'm still pretty confident we will finish the qualifying group in first position.' CG

ON THE SPOT

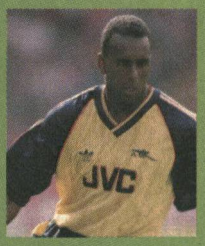


So England has no quality left-backs? Well, Arsenal's talented Ashley Cole has proved that old chestnut wrong with his recent displays for the national side. Luke Nicoli finds out what makes Ashley tick

What's the most memorable match you've played in and why?

Scoring on my full debut for Arsenal last season, with a free-kick against Man City, was a special feeling. I didn't expect to be in the first-team with Silvinho ahead of me in the pecking order, but that match really set the ball rolling and I never looked back. Obviously, making my England debut against Albania is right up there, too. Again, it was totally unexpected because I wasn't involved in the previous game against Finland. Mr Eriksson came over to me during lunch on the day of the game and said that I should prepare myself for the match. I was pleased and really enjoyed the game, despite getting hit by that cigarette lighter at the end of the game! Even when I gave the ball away, no one knocked me, they were encouraging instead.

Who's your footballing hero and why?



Having been at Arsenal since I was nine, I've been lucky to have seen many quality players at the club. As a left-back, I've studied Nigel Winterburn at close quarters and he's been a big influence on me. But when I joined Arsenal, I was a forward and in those early days I loved the flair players like Anders Limpar and the late David Rocastle (pictured), who could turn a game in an instant. More recently, Ian Wright has been a hero of mine; he has excelled both on and off the pitch and will go down in Highbury folklore for what he achieved at the club.

Which team do you support and why?

It's always been Arsenal, even as a small boy. One of my closest friends is Ledley King at Tottenham and although we grew up together and he went to Spurs as a schoolboy, it was always Arsenal for me. It's good to see that we've both come through the ranks at our respective clubs, although I keep telling him he made a mistake joining Tottenham!

What's the best piece of footballing advice you've been given?

The late George Armstrong, my first coach at Arsenal, always told me that no matter how well I thought I was doing, there's always room for improvement, and that's something I'll always remember, whether I'm playing in a friendly match or a big game for England. I owe most of what I have achieved so far to Geordie, and it was a tragedy when he was taken from us last year.

How do you think the big game against Germany will go?

Having been involved in our last game against Greece, I hope to stay involved and play in such a massive game. The lads are really confident and I've found that there is a real togetherness, just like you get at club level. When we came off the pitch in Athens, there was a real buzz among the lads; we feel we're on a bit of a roll at the moment and there will probably be no better time to go and get a result against Germany. This is a new era for England now, so hopefully we'll win and make it to next year's finals.

OPEN VERDICT

For the US Open, the final Grand Slam of the year, a player requires stamina, good form, inspiration and a little bit of luck, reveals British Eurosport commentator and former British number one Sam Smith

NOTHING COMPARES TO THE US Open. Forget the relaxed atmosphere of Melbourne, the glamour of Paris or the tradition of Wimbledon, the US Open is uniquely American with an atmosphere that inspires greatness.

The women's event is tough to predict this year, with Jennifer Capriati, Lindsay Davenport and Venus and Serena Williams all in with a chance of grabbing the title. Venus is my favourite. Her only problem is that she doesn't play enough, but with three warm-up events beforehand she should be on a roll. If Jennifer Capriati wins, she will become the first player since Steffi Graf to hold three of the four Grand Slams in one season. Even if she doesn't win, it's likely she will be world number one after the US Open.

Out of the younger players, it's tough to see another breakthrough like we had with Kim Clijsters at the French Open and Justine Henin at Wimbledon. Players like Jelena Dokic and Elena Dementieva are still a year or two away from a major breakthrough, although they could still cause the odd upset. Also, watch out for the rising crop of Russian teenagers following behind Kournikova, including Nadja Petrova and Elena Bovina.

If you want an outside bet, what about top seeded Martina Hingis? Her confidence is at an all-time low, so it will be interesting to see how she performs.

The men's event is equally open, although it will be tough to beat the drama and excitement of Goran Ivanisevic's win at Wimbledon. I think Lleyton Hewitt is now ready to win a Grand Slam and, with his love of hard courts, could finally make his breakthrough. Gustavo Kuerten could also be ready to live up to his top seeding as he has arrived in America early this summer to properly prepare for the US Open for the first time. The French Open champion is mainly known for his success on clay, but he has beefed up his game and is fresh following his break during Wimbledon.

Andre Agassi has already won the Australian Open this year, but he should have won both the French Open and Wimbledon, so he will be hungry to prove that he is the world number one. It will be interesting to see how impending fatherhood affects his game, as he and Steffi Graf are expecting their first child in December.

One person I wouldn't expect to see in the latter stages is Ivanisevic, as he should be exhausted from his summer of partying and celebrations after Wimbledon.

Andy Roddick is the pick of the younger generation. The teen sensation could make a huge impact in front of his home fans and storm to victory. He is only 19 years old but he has the game and maturity to succeed, plus he has the talent and charisma to make him the crowd favourite.

The youngsters of the game have been getting all the attention lately, but look out for some of the older generation, as it may be your last chance to catch them before they call it a day. For how long will Pete Sampras be able to keep himself motivated? Monica Seles is a similar story, and with her injuries I could see her announcing her retirement by the end of the year. Mary Pierce and Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario have both tasted Grand Slam glory in the past, but have dropped dramatically down the rankings so could call it a day soon too. cg

ON COURSE TO VICTORY?

The last Ryder Cup was marred by controversy, but, as Europe's captain Sam Torrance tells Ross Biddiscombe, this year is set to be explosive

THE 34TH RYDER CUP at the Belfry in Sutton Coldfield is this month set to be one of the most intense in history as Europe's top golfers once again do battle with the Old Enemy from the United States.

Over three days of competition, the 12-man teams will play for a total of 28 points in the most enthralling team golf event on the planet. What began as a sedate, gentlemanly contest between two nations in 1927 has become an intense and fiercely fought team battle watched by golf fans around the world.

Two years ago in Brookline, Massachusetts, the event's pressure valve popped and crowd abuse for the European players was a prelude to a highly inappropriate US team celebration before the match had actually been decided.

When America's Justin Leonard holed an improbable 50ft putt in his match against Spain's Jose Maria Olazabal, his team-mates, caddies and even some of the players' wives went wild and ran across the green to congratulate him. The problem was that Olazabal still had a putt himself which could have kept his game and the whole match alive. Such behaviour shocked the golfing world, but the Americans were largely unapologetic.

Although Scot Sam Torrance was the most vociferous critic at the time, this year's European captain has been quick to douse the matter. 'I don't think I'll have anything to say to the players on that score. I think we all know what has happened in the past and it's gone. So we should all forget that now and get on with this one,' says Torrance.

'Curtis Strange [this year's American captain] and I spoke about what happened last time for about 10 seconds at the start of our first meeting. Then the subject was done and dusted.'

One thing that Captain Sam will not tolerate is incitement. 'That applies to caddies, the wives, the players – everyone. It just comes down to the fact that we got a bit carried away at the last one. Everyone gets excited, but it's just keeping it to a minimum and let the clubs do the talking.'

The Belfry in Sutton Coldfield is where Europe has enjoyed many of its recent Ryder Cup triumphs. It is also the course where Torrance memorably holed the winning putt on the 18th green in Europe's 1985 victory.

However, it was not always so. The 7118-yard par 72 was no more than a bunch of potato fields not so long ago. It later became an outdoor concert venue for super groups like Led Zeppelin and only turned into a golf course in 1977.

In 1985, it staged its first Ryder Cup and the glory days began – Europe won the trophy for the first time since 1957. A 14-14 tie at the Belfry four years later was followed by defeat in 1993, but hopes are high this year for another European triumph despite the usual daunting look of the American team.

The all-conquering Tiger Woods and the new Open champion David Duval will lead the American challenge, which is full of major winners and Top 20-ranked players.

Photos: Empics

Europe will, as usual, be asking Ryder Cup new boys like Swedish pair Pierre Fulke and Niclas Fasth to play above their rankings and surprise their more illustrious opponents. But it is the experienced core of the European team, like Colin Montgomerie, that fans will look to for the critical points. And if you doubt the pressure the players are under in the Ryder Cups, then ask Europe's most experienced player about it.

Montgomerie describes how he stood on the final tee in Valderrama four years ago for his singles match as the worst he's ever felt. Europe was on the point of victory and he had the chance to deliver the winning point.

'I breathed very deep and tried to concentrate on doing nothing more than hitting that last fairway,' he says. 'Before I hit the ball I looked around, but I didn't see the crowds. All I could see was my 11 team-mates looking back at me and urging me to get a par amid all that mayhem. That's as bad as it gets. Mind you, it's also as good as it gets if you succeed.'

These words are something that the man who originally inspired the contest, seed merchant Samuel Ryder, would never have believed.

FOOTBALL

Republic of Ireland v Holland

Saturday 1st, 2.00pm, Sky Sports 1

World Cup qualifiers are real nail-biters for British and Irish football fans. Ireland lead their group, but the Dutch still have aspirations of automatic qualification. Neither will want to lose and a draw will allow others to gain ground, so Irish manager Mick McCarthy has to consider his tactics. He will look for performances of quality from players like Leeds hitman Robbie Keane (above).

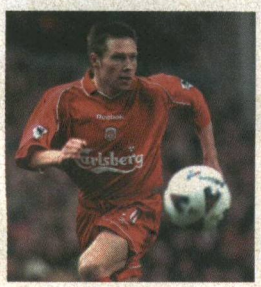
American Express Championship

Thursday 13th, 6.00pm, Sky Sports 2

The third of four scheduled World Golf Championship events starts today, the American Express Championships event at the Bellerive Country Club in St Louis. It's the third year of the WGC events that were set up specifically to provide more big-money tournaments for the world's best players outside the majors. The top 50 players in the world rankings start as favourites, but they fear 'wild cards' like Aussie Aaron Baddeley (above) who qualified by finishing top of his home tour.



FOOTBALL

Newcastle United v Liverpool

Premiership pay-per-view football

In the past few seasons, games between Newcastle United and Liverpool have been one of the best Premiership guarantees for drama and goals. There have been last-minute winners, high-scoring blow-outs and plenty of candidates for goal of the season. The Reds are real title contenders this year, led by the likes of Nick Barmby (left) and Michael Owen. Meanwhile, the Toon are still thanking Bobby Robson for coming to their rescue and aiming them back up the league table.

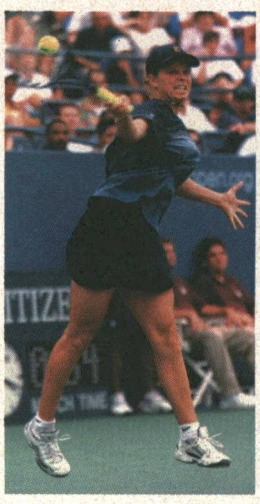
Well, it's almost happened thanks to teenagers like Kim Clijsters (right), who returns to the Sparkassen Cup tournament this week in Leipzig, Germany, as defending champion.



CRICKET

Leicestershire v Warwickshire

Wednesday 5th, 4.00pm, 7.30pm, Sky Sports 1

Leicestershire (whose Jon Dakin is pictured) made the perfect start to the limited overs season with eight wins out of eight in the first half of the Norwich Union campaign. One of those victories was a five-wicket pounding of newly promoted Warwickshire in June. All-rounder Ben Smith's 65 was the crucial innings that day. It helped put Leicestershire at the top of the Division One table while Warwickshire took a place in the chasing bunch.

ALAN CURBISHLEY

Since his last column, Alan has splashed the cash and signed Jason Euell from Wimbledon and Luke Young from Spurs. Here he discusses what he looks for in a new player, and how he likes to prepare for matches

THERE ARE A NUMBER of important ingredients I look for when I'm after a new player. A major factor is their age – that they're young enough for us to have an effect on them and for them to have an effect on us. And they've got to be hungry. But they also have to know about our team – it's no good attracting foreign players simply because they want to live in London. So I've gone for those that have actually played against Charlton or at least know something about us.

Ideally, if everyone's fit I should have two players for every position. So, at the moment, if you look at our forward line, with Jason Euell, I've got four senior players competing for two positions.

It's difficult to keep everyone in the team happy when you're in the process of strengthening the squad, but there's one thing I'm really concerned about this season, and that is complacency. The last three or four years we've gone into the pre-season preparations with a definite aim – promotion, trying to stay up, then going back up and trying to stay there again. So this season I don't want any players thinking they can relax just because we did well last year.

We try to make sure all our homework is done before we face a team. We like to have all the teams watched as many times as we can, but normally at least four times, so we are armed with in-depth reports on them. Preferably, if we're preparing for a home game, we like to have the other team watched in an away fixture.

We tend to work on general team training at the start of the week – we may have a quick team session to loosen everybody up, then we'll concentrate on certain individuals or groups of players. But by Thursday, we'll be focusing our training on our up-coming opponents, thinking about their strengths and where we can hurt them; we may ask the reserves to play as the opposition.

I always let the players know who's in the team by Friday morning, home or away, and I normally work out who's going to be on the subs' bench on Saturday morning, when I'm satisfied that everyone's OK and there are no illnesses.

Which, of course, I hope won't be the case before Charlton's live matches on cable this month. First up, we face Fulham at home. They had an absolutely fantastic season last year, when they ran away with the Division One title. Charlton ran away with it the season before that, but we got pegged back a bit towards the end. I think the First Division may not have been as strong overall last season as when Charlton were there, when we had Ipswich and Manchester City snapping at our heels more or less the whole time.

But results breed confidence and confidence breeds results. Fulham were certainly getting plenty of results last season, but I'd be interested to see if they can attack the Premiership the way they attacked the First Division. It's going to be tougher for them in the Premier League. But the exciting thing for Fulham is that they are actually playing in the League; they will be going to grounds that will be packed out every week, and the atmosphere will be totally different to what they encountered last year.

Our next cable fixture is against Leeds at the Valley [a game that will be available on pay- per-view]. When we played Leeds at home last year, Mark Viduka scored after 11 seconds. It was unbelievable. We managed to peg them back for the first half, got ourselves back into the game and equalised. But, lo and behold, they scored again within a minute of the restart.

Finally we face Chelsea at Stamford Bridge. We took six points off them last season and played very well in both games. But Chelsea have made some good buys, made some changes, and they know if they can pick up more points away from home, then they've got a great chance of doing something this season.

Both Leeds and Chelsea have world-class players, so I'm under no illusions – we're looking at two tough games there.
